FREE COINAGE TALK.

Mr. Crisp Speaks in Behalf of Silver.

The House Crowded to Its Utmost Seating Capacity to Hear the Closing of the Debate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The public and private galleries of the house were thronged today in anticipation of the closing of the debate on the senate free coinage substitute for the bond bill. The attendance on the floor was also very large. Mr. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, insisted on the regular order as soon as the journal had been read and under the arrangements made yesterday, one hour was allowed on each side for closing. Mr. Crisp, representing free silver, said this was an economic question and no matter what views the members might have entertained in the past, he assumed that in casting his vote today each member would do so conscientiously in accordance with the dictates of his convictions.

Mr. Crisp opened his argument proper with the familiar words, "In 1873 congress demonetized silver. At the very threshold of the subject," he said, "this was denied and it was also denied that up to 1873 we had had bimetallistic in this country." He quoted Baron Rothschild's statement that prices were regulated by the aggregate amount of the circulation, gold and silver. "Prices were fixed by the amount of primary money in the world. If the standard in England was gold, in France silver and in China silver the measure of values would be the combined amount of both gold and silver circulating as money. Money was the thing for which all contended and the sum of the demand for money was equal to the demand for all things else on earth. If a metal was made money by law, a demand for that metal would be created among all the people and its value would necessarily increase with the increased demand." Here he read from statements made by Senator Sherman in 1876 that the demonetization of silver had caused a reduction of its price and had created a mad scramble for gold on the part of England, France and Germany, which had appreciated its price and had induced a fall in prices throughout the world. That fall of prices, Mr. Crisp asserted, was largely due, he would not say wholly, to the demonetization of silver. It was not the fall of prices that was complained of but the constant and steady fall of prices due to the constant appreciation of gold. He read from Mr. Balfour's speech of the 9th inst. in the English parliament, attributing the decline of agriculture in gold countries to the appreciation of gold and the artificial advantage it gave to silver countries. Mr. Balfour had also declared that the obstacles to reform came not from abroad, but were put forward at home. Continuing, Mr. Crisp affirmed the existence of a well defined purpose by those in authority, both here and abroad, to depress the price of silver in order to prevent its remonitization. He cited the manner in which the Bland-Allison act of 1878 was executed, the coinage of the minimum amount under the act and the refusal of the treasury, after a few months to coin silver under the act of 1890. He cited Secretary Carlisle's refusal to give silver for gold in 1893, "because the silver was needed for the redemption of the treasury notes." And his course a few months afterward in redeeming those notes in gold. "What kind of juggling is that?" he asked. "What sort of friendly treatment of silver is that?" He then directed his attention to the manner in which the parity between the metals had been maintained. Every obligation of the government, bonds, greenbacks and treasury notes, was payable in coin. If that was not true, and they were gold obligations, why did not those who believed that have the courage to say so and save the tax ridden people millions in interest. In February, 1895, congress could have saved the people $16 000 000 in interest by authorizing gold bonds. "Congress refused," said Mr. Crisp. 'We paid sixteen million for the privilege of paying in silver and now you attempt to deny our right to do so."

WARNING FOR A PASTOR.

Threat to Blow Up His House if He Doesn't Leave Saloons Alone.

FOWLER, Ind., Feb. 14.—Rev. Robert G. Hammond, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Amia, received an anonymous threat against his life and family through the mail yesterday morning. The letter said his house would be blown up with dynamite unless he stopped his warfare against the saloons. It occasioned no little excitement and detectives will attempt to discover the writer. About three weeks ago Constable Charles Haver, of this city, was waylaid and brutally beaten. The saloon men profess ignorance and have donated $50 toward detecting the perpetrators.

RIVALS QUARREL.

Both Sought the Affections of Clara Clemens.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va, Feb. 14.—In the depot at Pocohantas last night, George Gray and Len Hartzook engaged in a quarrel over a woman. Gray shot and killed Hartzook after Hartzook had fired two shots at Gray without effect. During the affray Miss Clara Clemens was shot and seriously injured. Gray escaped.

Weyler's Purpose.

NEW YORK Feb. 14.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana says: It is learned unofficially that General Weyler will personally take the field very soon. Captain General Weyler's purpose is said to be to place his command between the armies of Gomez and Maceo, in the neighborhood of Quivican, and force one or both to give battle to him.

WINDING UP AFFAIRS.

The Somewhat Dilatory World's Fair Board Meets.

The Diplomas and Medals, Which Number Several Thousand, Now Ready for Distribution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The world's fair board of control, which is the executive body of the Columbian commission, is in session here, transacting various odds and ends of business relating to the Chicago exposition that yet remain undisposed of. One of the board's duties is to officially promulgate the award of the 23,000 to 25,000 medals and diplomas that were awarded to exhibitors at the fair. The cases for the medals have been finished and some kind of a tubular device will be prepared for the safe transmission of the diplomas. It is expected that everything will be ready in less than a month. The action of Director General Davis in making his report to congress instead of first submitting it to the board of control is a source of dissatisfaction and irritating to the members. It is felt by them that etiquette required that this report should have been made to the board in the same manner as those of all the bureaus of other branches. It was not regarded as complete, or slighted any one of the branches of the exposition, or included anything that was not properly within its scope, what was missing could be inserted and the objectionable and unsatisfactory features be changed or eliminated as the board might see fit.

MAHER KNOCKED OUT.

Not by Pugilist Bob, But by Sand in His Eyes.

He is Totally Blind and is Kept in a Darkened Room—Will Fight Monday.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 14.—Peter Maher's eyes were a trifle better this morning, but there is no telling yet whether he will or will not be able to enter the ring on Monday. The opinions of the physicians still differ, some maintaining that he will be cut in three days, and others giving him at least a week to remain in his room. Even if Maher is able to enter the ring on Monday, he will not be able to do himself justice. He has been practically out of training for a week and he certainly will be able to do nothing between now and Monday. If the fight comes off on that day Fitzsimmons' chances will be greatly improved. He is in splendid condition. This morning Maher was still locked in the little room in which he was placed last night. The shades were drawn and every ray of light carefully excluded. Hot bags were applied to his eyes at frequent intervals during the night and when he finally dropped off to sleep toward morning a poultice was applied. There is no doubt that he is in a very bad condition. Maher is greatly worried lest the public think he has backed down or the sore eyes are a subterfuge to enable him to avoid going into the ring. Anybody seeing the man's condition could not entertain such an idea for an instant. He is not only utterly unable to see, but so helpless that he cannot care for himself. Connolly, his trainer, said this morning: "If Peter rounds to by Monday there will be a fight as far as we are concerned. We are sure that our man can win even if he has been compelled to let up in his training. He is dead game and more than willing to fight. If he can see when Monday comes around he will get into the ring." Stuart says that he is ready to pull off the fight at any time when the men are ready. "We would be on our way to the battle ground by now," he added, "if Maher had been in any shape at all. I was prepared to pull off the fight today and I am ready to pull it off at any time the principals are ready. There will be no flake on my part when the time comes."

The spot where the battle ground is to be is still a secret. Everybody thinks that it would have been in Mexico, near the line of the Southern Pacific railway, anywhere from fifty to a hundred miles east of El Paso. Nobody knows where it would have been or what conditions may arise, it is claimed, that will permit the fight to come off in Juarez without interference, but this is not likely. The mere suggestion yesterday of such a thing seemed very funny to Governor Ahumuda. "Oh, yes," he said, "right here in the bull pen. Let the gentlemen come. It will be so much easier than chasing them along the banks of the Rio Grande, and then the bull pen is so close to the jail. Nothing could be more convenient. Let them come."

MAHER GOES TO LAS CRUCES.

Peter Maher was taken back to Las Cruces this morning. An occulist accompanied the pugilist. He would express no positive opinion as to his patient being able to fight within any specified time.

"There seems to be a little less inflammation this morning," Dr. White said, after looking at the eyes just before the start. "Maher may be able to enter the ring Monday and make a fight."

Six Texas rangers kept guard about Maher's room last night. Two were planted at the foot of the stairs, two across the way and one on each side of the entrance.

Fitzsimmons came over from Juarez to the theater last night. During the performance two Rangers entered the box and told Fitzsimmons he was under arrest. The Australian was frightened, but was told to see the show and go home, as he was not to be taken to jail. After the show Fitzsimmons was escorted to the river by the Rangers. The managers insist the fight will take place. No attempt will be made to bring off any of the other fights before Monday. Many people are leaving the city for home.

THE IRON MARKET.

The Feeling in it Continues Hopeful.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14—The Iron Trade Review this week will say: "While there is no pronounced increase in mill tonnage from week to week, the feeling in the iron market continues hopeful. A significant feature is the general steadiness of prices on finished material, with so many mills only partly employed. The confidence that larger demand is not far ahead serves to hold prices where they are, and mills seem unwilling to make the sharp cuts that might result in fuller order books, wanting rather to be in a position to take business at a profit, as the demand grows. Conditions governing the pig iron market have not changed. A production in January in excess of consumption caused some settling of prices on foundry grades, but the lowest prices on southern irons are not made by the largest interests in that section. Reports from the east indicate stationary prices, with more liberal buying of foundry iron. Mills are getting to the point at which more business must be had if the moderate January pace of operations is kept up, but there appears a general belief that the awaited movement will materialize in time to hold the present basis."

It was further stated that Maxim Gomez was still in the vicinity of Havana.

BRIGHAM'S VIEWS.

The Master of the National Grange Talks.

General Condition of Farmers is Not Improved—Free Wool Has Not Benefited Them.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14—J. P. Brigham, of Delta, Ohio, master of the National Framers' Grange, who is now in this city, speaking of the general condition of the farmers says: "Over the entire country there seems to be a common suffering among farmers and also a very unequality of crops. In some parts of the country the crops have been heavy, but in other sections farmers have been particularly unfortunate. Prices are lower this year than they have ever been. The suffering among farmers all over the country is a great deal worse this year than it has been for years. Prices are lower than they were during the panic of 1893 and 1894 Oats, hay, corn and potatoes are not selling for over half the price that was secured last year. The farmer who was fortunate enough to have large crops is not in an enviable position and the farmer who suffered by small crops is worse off. Their general condition is not encouraging and I cannot see any indication of future prosperity until definite action is taken by the government on tariff and monetary questions. The farmers feel that they were grossly discriminated against when wool was put on the free list and many of them have suffered from this The theory that free wool would benefit us has not been substantiated by results and we have suffered from this among other things."

TURKISH OUTRAGES.

Sad Story Which Comes to a Young Armenian.

MILWAUKEE, Wis, Feb. 14—Giragos Tomauian is a young Armenian of this city, who has just received sad news from home. The young man is almost prostrated by a letter which he received from his uncle, Khiatjain Tomauian written December 21, 1895, in the village of Ozzounaba, Palaus, province of Diarbekir, Armenia. This place is twenty days distant from Constantinople by horse. The letter says: "I wrote you the horrible happenings which are unequalled in the history of our village. Brother, they have struck our quiet village; they have burned our church and our home and robbed us of everything They have killed nearly every one. Those who are left have changed their religion and have become Mohammedans. But this is not all. Let me write and relate about your home. Your brother's wife and your little boy are killed. Your wife and mother have thrown themselves into the Euphrates in order to save themselves from the Turkish outrages. Your sister is living yet, but I wish she might have been killed with the rest, for they have taken her and married her to a Kurd and have changed religion to Mohammedanism. The massacre continued for three days. Very few of us are left now in the village."

NEGRO HANGED.

Murdered His Neighbor Without Provocation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14—John, alias "Patsy" Harris, a negro murderer, was hanged in the District of Columbia jail at 11:37 this morning.

The crime for which John, alias "Patsy" Harris today paid the death penalty was committed on the afternoon of July 4th last, in that portion of Georgetown known as "Boston." Matthew Spruell, the murdered man, and Harris, both colored, lived in the same house, together with their families On the day of the murder Harris came home under the influence of liquor, and understanding his wife to say that Spruell had refused to speak to her, immediately started out looking for trouble. He found Spruell in a barber shop and fired at the wall of the room merely, he says, to scare him. Spruell becoming frightened, ran into the street, pursued by Harris, who fired upon him with fatal effect. There was little or no provocation for the murder, although Harris claimed on the witness stand that Spruell at first made an assault upon him with a razor. Harris was twenty-five years of age and leaves a wife and child.

Wants to Prove She is Part Negro.

MUNCIE, Ind., Feb. 14—James Walker, colored, and his wife, who was Miss Hallie Shaffer, white, were in the police court on the charge of unlawfully marrying. Mayer Cremer with held his decision and they were returned to jail, not being able to furnish bond for $1 000. Miscegenation in Indiana is a felony punishable by a fine of $1,000 and ten years' imprisonment. The woman says her grandfather was a negro and that his wife was a white woman. Walker's father was thought to be a white man. Mrs. Walker says she will prove that she is part negro.

IDENTIFIED THE HAT.

Miss Bryan's Parents Recognize Her Headgear.

The Canal Being Dragged in the Hopes of Finding the Head of the Murdered Girl.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14—The authorities here have a letter from Greencastle, Ind., in which the parents of Pearl Bryan identify the hat sent to them as that of Pearl, and give other information that has lead to all the officers being employed today in searching for the head. The canal was drained during the night and different sections of workmen have examined its muddy bottom, but nothing has been found up to noon, although the whole course of the canal was examined. The officers think now that the hat found near the body was that of Pearl; that she was knocked senseless and that the head was probably badly beaten up before it was cut off. Everything is being done to get all the evidence available on this side of the river, so as to turn Jackson and Walling over to the Kentucky authorities tomorrow.

A special from Frankfort, Ky, says: "Governor Bradley has been examing the cases today and requested Sheriff Plummer to return to Newport, Ky., for additional papers and evidence and that he would then issue the requisition tomorrow. Sheriff Plummer left for Frankfort at noon and will return tomorrow, but it is not expected that Jackson and Walling will not be transferred until next week, as their lawyers will go to Governor Bushnell to contest the requisition.

"COPS ARE COMIN'."

The Dog Must Have Heard About It.

He Made His Escape Before the Officers Arrived—Police Station Scrubbed Out.

Somebody reported to Officer Phipps this morning that there was a dog at No. 46 West Creighton avenue that was in a bad shape. It was said the dog got its foot in a steel trap about a month ago and immediately crawled under the house. He had been there most of the time ever since and nobody could get near him to release his foot from the trap. Officer Phipps was asked to shoot the dog. He reported the case to Humane Officer Schlaudroff because the dog was in such a place that one man alone could not reach him. The two officers went to the house this forenoon, but the dog had disappeared, trap and all.

SCRUBBED OUT.

The police station received a scrubbing out this morning. The officers over there say this has become a regular annual event, and that they scrub out on Valentine day each year whether the place needs it or not.

CASE OF CRUELTY.

When Officer Hines went to the barn at No. 30 Hough street yesterday evening to remove the tramp who claimed his feet were frozen, he found also a goat with a broken leg. Hines found the party to whom the animal belonged and ordered him to kill the crippled goat at once. It was learned that the animal had been suffering with the broken leg for a long time and that it had received no attention.

ELECTION PRECINTS.

Under the newly redistricted wards there will be in the city forty-four election precincts. Under the old arrangement there were thirty six.

GARBAGE WAGONS.

The new garbage wagons were taken to the crematory this morning. They attracted much attention as they were hauled down street. The four wagons cost the city $900.

A CHEEKY TRAMP.

The police took up a tramp in a barn at No. 30 Hough street, yesterday, who claimed that both feet were frozen. He was taken in the patrol wagon to Hope hospital, where Dr. Schrader examined him and found there was nothing wrong with him. The tramp was ordered to leave the hospital and became so abusive that he was locked up in the police station. The imposter admitted that he practiced the deception hoping he would be allowed to remain in the hospital until the cold weather was over.

REMOVED A CHILD.

Humane Officer Schlaudroff yesterday took a thirteen year-old girl from the family of Mrs. Florence Case, of No. 117 West Butler street. Neighbors claimed the child was being mistreated at home.

WOLF THE WINNER.

He Carries Off the Prize in the Billiard Tournament.

Last night the billiard tournament which has been in progress at the Home billiard hall ended in a victory for Sam Wolf. He played seven games and won every one. Last night's game was between Wolf and Cooper. Cooper was to make 150 to Wolf's 100. In the twelfth inning the score stood Cooper 85, Wolf 9. Then Wolf made a spurt and ran out his string when Cooper had 141. The prize diamond pin was presented to Wolf. Johnson and Thomas have both challenged him to a new championship series to be played within sixty days. The summary of the tournament is as follows:

PICKPOCKETS

Operate Among High School Scholars.

Numerous Petty Thefts Occur in the Cloak Rooms During the School Hours.

The scholars of the High school, on East Wayne street, have for the last few weeks been the victims of petty pick pockets. Numerous times lately small amounts of money have been stolen from them during school hours.

The thefts have been committed in the cloak rooms. A number of the young lady scholars get their noonday lunches down town each day, and for this purpose they carry a small amount of change. They leave their money in their coat pockets in the cloak rooms. Frequently, of late, these pockets have been picked. Today one young lady looked for her lunch money and found it gone. To a SENTINEL reporter she said she had been robbed several times before, having lost, altogether, about $2 50. Several other girls standing near added that others had suffered in a similar manner, some of them being among the victims.

An effort is being made to capture the thief, but thus far it has been unsuccessful.

It is hoped he may be caught and thieving thus be stopped.

DID you get your valentine, and do you know who sent it?

IF Mr. Hunter could get five more votes he would be the next United States senator from Kentucky—so near, and yet so far.

THE New York Herald wants "the United States to go slow in recognizing belligerent rights of Cubans." According to our way of thinking, that's just what we have been doing—too awfully slow.

MR. GLADSTONE is not yet again in the British parliament; there is only the rumor that he has determined despite his age, to return. It is only for the cause of Armenia, and the fact that she has been forsaken in the hour of her crucifixion by Great Britain and by all the powers of Europe, that at this period in his life could induce him to even think of re-entering the great world-arena of debate.

MASSACHUSETTS is in the throes of a campaign to change the state constitution so as to provide for biennial elections and legislatures. The opposition to the change is very vigorous, based on the argument that frequent elections insure greater fidelity on the part of public officers, who are called to accountability at frequent intervals of time, while biennial elections place the officers and legislatures farther away from the people. This is a very strong argument, but it has been made without avail in all the states that have adopted the biennial system. Massachusetts is one of the very few remaining states which adhere to the annual system.

THE state census recently completed in Kansas shows a decrease of 97,000, compared with the census of 1890 Taking into account the natural increase of its population, it is evident that at least 150,000 people have moved out of Kansas since 1890, and more are going. This migration is attributed to the long continued drought and bad crops. Efforts are being made to attract some of the people of the large cities to Kansas, but the movement does not seem to succeed very well. It looks as if Kansas would have to be able to point to several good crops before it can hope to add any considerable number of desirable settlers to its population.

BANKRUPTCY bills are pending in both houses of congress, but, as has been the case in several previous congresses, it is by no means certain that the interest in the matter will crystallize in legislation. The judiciary committee of both houses are considering bills. In the house it is likely that a measure similar to the Torrey bill, which has heretofore been in evidence, will pass. Such a bill is now before a sub committee. There is a controversy in the committee as to whether both voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy shall be provided for. Two members of the committee stand wide apart on this question, but it is said that there may be a compromise between them on the basis of involuntary bankruptcy in cases of fraud.

The North Pole.

If the report is true that the north pole has been found, it is a very important discovery, for by it that has been accomplished which men have been seeking for hundreds of years. It will be of no special scientific value except the fact of having discovered the north pole. There is no difference there from any other point on the earth's surface except that it is at the pole or the stationary point on the earth's axis, from which every direction is south. It would simply be a scientific satisfaction to know that that much talked of region had been visited and explored by man.

Many brave men have tried to find the north pole, and many have been the lives lost in these efforts. At first there was some rational excuse for the risk taken in casting one's self away on the great desert of ice north of the arctic circle. Early in the century navigators had strange notions about the northwestern passage, but of late years the discovery of the north pole has come to be a mere matter of sentiment. It may be that Dr. Nansen will have discovered something of importance at the pole, but few believe that beyond the gratification of curiosity, with a report that "the north star is directly overhead, or near it," or that "the pole is surrounded by ice" or "by an open sea," much will be added to the sum of human knowledge.

Useful or not, wise or not, scientific or not, possible or not, the discovery of the pole is, or was, a necessity that, once set up, had to be complied with. The most remarkable work done in this line has been of recent years. Not more than a dozen of the many expeditions that set out with great ado have accomplished anything worthy of mention, and for each actual voyage of exploration there have been numerous search or relief expeditions. In the case of the Franklin expedition, for instance, no less than forty different attempts were made to rescue or at least learn the fate of the party.

Among the most notable voyages of discovery were these, mentioned below in chronological order:

1827—Captain Parry reached latitude 82 45

1827—Captain Ross (with the Victory) lost in the ice, reached latitude 81 27.

1845—Sir John Franklin (with the Erebus and Terror) lost in the ice.

1853—Dr. Kane (Advance) reached latitue 80 35.

1871—Captain Peterman (Hansa) 81.05.

1871—Captain Hall (Polaris) 82 16.

1876—Captain Nares (Alert and Discovery), 83 10.

1879—Lieutenant De Long (Jeannette), lost; 72.15.

1881—Lieutenant Greely (Proteus), 83.20.

1891—Lieutenant Peary (Kite), 83.24.

1892—Bjoring and Kalshmins (Ripple), lost; 76 49.

1893—Lieutenant Peary (Falcon), 82 34.

It is believed by many students of arctic matters that Dr. Nansen has not drifted nearer the pole than the eightieth parallel of latitude, or 600 miles from the goal for which he has risked his life. He may now be fast in the ice in the latitude of northern Spitzbergen or southern Franz Josef Land, and if this should prove to be the case he will only have four or five hundred miles to travel to reach Siberia. If he has met with difficulty and turned back in time, before the strength of his men has become exhausted by the long vigils and many deprivations of the Arctic nights, he may yet succeed in reaching civilization with the survivors of his party.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Act Preventing Garnishment Said to Have Been Evaded.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Feb. 14.—Three suits were filed here yesterday that are said to be the only ones of the kind ever brought in the state. Robert Green, an engineer on the Panhandle, is the plaintiff and the several defendants are the Logan Milling company, David C. Beatty, a fruit dealer, and T. M. Quigley & Co., candy manufacturers.

This is a strong labor union city, and several years ago a business block was built by non-union workmen. The result was that every labor union boycotted the building and would buy nothing from the occupants or from any person who encouraged them One or two men began business in the building, but all failed after a short time. One of these was Charles Chidester, a son-in-law of Green. Green loaned him $2 000 to begin business, and in a short time he was $3,000 in debt, and had a stock worth but $2 300. Green then assumed the debts and took the stock and closed the business. The defendants mentioned above then sold their accounts to G. O. Smith, a lawyer of Wheeling, W. Va, who brought suit against the railroad company at Wheeling as garnishee defendant and collected the amounts from Green's wages.

It is alleged that by selling the accounts out of the state the defendants evaded the law, which prohibits garnishment, and allows a householder exemption on $600 worth of property. The present suits are brought to recover damages accrued from this evasion. The case is attracting a great deal of attention among lawyers, and will be carried to the supreme court before a final settlement can be made

All wise men should read the great advertisement of the new firm, A. K. Hurst & Co., proprietors of the Globe.

Big Bequest.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—A bequest of $50,000 has been made to the college for women of the Western Reserve university by Mrs. S. V. The gift is given towards the establishment of a chair of biblical literature in the institution, and the entire amount will be at the disposal of the college within the present year.

Jury's Verdict.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14.—The jury in the Holliday damage case brought in a verdict which awarded damages to Mrs Fannie Holliday in the sum of $500 for malicious prosecution. The case attracted considerable attention from the fact that Mrs. E. L. Holliday, who was a co-defendant with her husband, was a daughter of the late Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio.

GRATIFYING RESULTS.

Interesting Experiments with the New Stomach Remedy.

Not a Patent Medicine, But a Safe Cure for All Forms of Indigestion.

The results of recent investigation, have established, beyond question, the great value of the new preparation for indigestion and stomach troubles; it is composed of the digestive acids, pepsin, bismuth, Golden Seal and similar stomachics, prepared in the form of 20 grain lozenges, pleasant to the taste, convenient to carry when traveling, harmless to the most delicate stomach, and probably the safest, most effectual cure yet discovered for indigestion, sour stomach, loss of appetite and flesh, nausea, sick headaches, palpitation of heart, and the many symptoms arising from imperfect digestion of food. They cure because they cause the food to be promptly and thoroughly digested before it has time to sour, ferment and poison the blood and nervous system.

Judge Frank Ives, of District Court of Crookston, Minn., says: For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit, with few exceptions, I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years.

Geo. W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen appetite, perfect digestion.

Mr. W. D. Tomlin, Mechanical Engineer, Duluth, Minn.: One box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has done its work, and I am again gaining flesh and strength.

O. E. Rasom, Hustonville, Ky.: I was distressed and annoyed for two years with throwing up food, often two or three times a day; had no certainty of retaining a meal if I ate one. Four boxes of the tablets from my druggist, have fully cured me. I find them pleasant to take, convenient to carry.

Rev. G. D. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.: The effect of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is simply marvellous; a quite hearty dinner of broiled beef steak causes no distress since I began their use.

Over six thousand people in the state of Mich. alone in 1894 were cured of stomach troubles by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Full sized packages may be found at all druggists at 50c., or sent by mail on receipt of price from Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

FATE IN FEBRUARY.

[A Valentine.]

When all the fields are white with snow,
And February's sun is fair,
With Lelia's dimpled face aglow,
What care I for the winter air?

Companioned so within the sleigh,
Her silver voice is cheer enough,
And while the horses speed away
One hand I clasp within the muff.

Her lily lidded, azure eyes
Add to the quick, electric thrill,
For now two human destinies
Depend upon a maiden's will.

The friendly south wind's soft caress
Bespeaks a solution fair,
And one unruly, roguish tress
Falls where it banishes despair.

Upon a wayside orchard bole
We note the frisky chickadee.
He seems to say: "Upon my soul,
Two precious fools, oh, see, oh, see!"

What would he give it, from its bark,
He could ascend to joy like this,
Or, when the evening shades grow dark,
Imprint the repetitious kiss?

Dear Lelia, though the spring delay,
And all the summer turn to snow,
Our lives are pledged to endless May,
And nothing else I care to know.

JOEL BENTON.

THE LEADING LADY.

A VALENTINE DAY SKETCH.

[Copyright, 1896, by American Press Association.]

Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company, was in a very bad humor as she stepped off the train at Groveville. The weather had something to do with it, no doubt. It was weather such as the English describe as "beastly," yet it was characteristic of February.

But the weather was not all to blame. Miss Defoe had been a leading lady for three months, and she was thoroughly disgusted with the stage. She had worked for several years with this ambition in view, and now that she had reached it she wished that her lot had been cast anywhere but on the stage.

The prospect was certainly not allurring. The tour of the Walkback Dramatic company had not been successful. Salaries had not been paid since the first week out, and now there was a possibility that the entire combination would be stranded in some out of the way nook on the New England circuit.

She envied the young women whom she saw in the cheerful homes she passed by in her walk to the barnlike hotel. They had fond mothers and kind fathers probably and friends whom they had known for years. They did not have to travel all day in drafty, uncomfortable cars, eat their meals at railroad restaurants and wonder on what day they would be left penniless among strangers.

Yet she realized that these same young women envied her.

"Fools, every one," she muttered to herself and followed the rest of the company into the hotel.

In fact, a good many people in Groveville were feeling rather sour that day. The rain that had begun at daylight was still falling steadily and was turning the snow into slush that seemed to exert a dampening and chilling influence over everything and everybody.

John Brickley was perhaps the most cheerful man in town. Just why we will see later. Let us state right here that the dead walls and board fences of Groveville had announced for seven successive days that on Feb. 14 the Walkback Dramatic company, "a grand aggregation of histrionic stars," would present the ever popular drama of "Fanchon, the Cricket," in the opera house.

The prophecy of the posters had come to pass. It was St. Valentine's day, and the Walkback Dramatic company was here. The citizens did not seem to be unduly excited over the fact, however. The "histrionic stars" themselves were soon made aware of this. Their information came from the manager soon after his return from a visit to the local celebrity described on the programmes as "lessee and manager."

"Well, what luck?" inquired the leading man as the manager deposited his dripping umbrella in a corner of the hotel corridor.

"Same as usual, d—n poor. Small advance sales. Probably won't have $50 in the house tonight."

"Even the weather's against us," dolefully remarked the leading man.

"Yes, and everything else. Let's go get a drink."

And they did.

John Brickley didn't care a snap for the weather. He had said so a dozen times that afternoon to the customers who had come splashing in out of the wet. Why should he? In the center of his well stocked grocery a big salamander stove blazed away cheerfully, and he was warm and dry.

"HERE'S A PACKAGE FOR YOU, THEN."

Besides this, John was something of a philosopher. So is any man who has been successful. It comes easy when fortune smiles. And John considered that fortune had smiled on him. He had a good business, a neat bank account and nothing to worry him. John helped himself to a cigar from the showcase, swung himself into an easy position on the counter and fell to gazing at a lithograph which hung in his store window. It was a picture of Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company.

"Mighty handsome young lady," John soliloquized. "Hanged if I don't shut up early tonight and go to see that show."

John continued to gaze at the picture. He had very little else to do, as customers were scarce.

John's gazing ended in his making another determination. He felt quite pleased and not a little astonished with himself after he had made it. He chuckled frequently as he ate his supper that night.

"I wonder what the fellows will say to that?" he remarked audibly. Evidently he had matured a scheme in his mind and was picturing the surprise of his friends when he should relate it to them.

John Brickley was quite a favorite among the young men in town. He went to Boston several times a year and had even spent a week in New York. No one doubted that he could have married almost any girl in the village had he so chosen. But he didn't choose. He said he was going to look around a little before he got married.

So John Brickley, being highly satisfied with himself, was convinced that his scheme, whatever it was, was a brilliant and original one. However, it did not interfere with his attending the production of "Fanchon, the Cricket," at the opera house that evening.

He was there in a front seat and a component part of the slim audience that awaited the rise of the curtain.

Behind the footlights there was gloom. The "histrionic stars" were, as a local scene shifter expressed it, "readin the riot act to the boss." They were making a combined onslaught on the manager.

Miss Blanche Defoe was just having her say.

"If the ghost doesn't walk within a week, I'm going to shake the whole business, and that's a straight tip. See?" she concluded with an angry stamp of her foot.

"You'll find the walking bad," retorted the manager with a weak attempt at a laugh.

Miss Defoe did not consider this ancient joke worthy of a reply, but marched off haughtily to the back of the stage and sat down on a trunk.

Just then an usher came in from the front of the house and asked for Miss Defoe.

"That's me," she said.

"Here's a package for you, then."

"Now I wonder what this is," she said as she read the address and noticed that there were no postage stamps on the parcel.

"Why don't you open it and see?" remarked the "leading old lady," who had just joined her.

"Good idea," and Miss Defoe proceeded to break the string and tear off the paper wrapping. A pasteboard box was disclosed, and on the cover was written:

"From a fond admirer."

Miss Defoe took off the cover and lifted out a gorgeous piece of blue satin, silk cords and paper lace.

"A valentine, by all that's tragic," she exclaimed.

"And a very pretty one, too," said the leading old lady. "You must have made a hit, my dear."

"All up for the first scene," was the call which interrupted further discussion of the valentine and its mysterious sender.

Miss Defoe went on and capered through the first act as Fanchon with considerably more spirit than any of the other members of the cast could muster. She was thinking of something besides her lines, though.

When the act was over, she took advantage of the wait which the inexperienced scene shifter caused and sent for the usher who had brought her the valentine.

"Do you know the person who sent that package to me?" she asked.

The usher did. He knew all about him and was most happy to give Miss Defoe all the details concerning John Brickley. He even pointed out to her the unsuspecting John through a peephole in the curtain.

"Come back here after the next act," said Miss Defoe to the usher. "I want you to take a note to him."

Miss Defoe was a young lady who could hit with great promptness on occasions.

The note was duly delivered, and as a result John Brickley found himself waiting in the parlor of the hotel at 11:15 p. m. that same night, his heart beating somewhat rapidly, but with a determination to see the thing through.

When the actress swept in, clothed in a neat fitting tailor made suit, John felt the last bit of his self possession slipping away from him. He had always been free from embarrassment when in the company of any of the village belles, but before this dashing young woman it was different. Miss Defoe, however, quickly broke the ice.

"Is it you I have to thank for the very

"WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE ORIGINAL?"

pretty valentine I received this evening?" she asked, with a gracious smile.

"Why, yes. I—er—I took the liberty."

"It was very kind of you to remember me."

"I—I had seen your picture," said John hesitatingly, "and I thought you were very—that is—I admired it, and—and"—

"I see," said Miss Defoe, with an effective little laugh. "Well, what do you think of the original?"

John's face grew very red at this frank question, but he was equal to the emergency.

"I think you're just as pretty as the picture, Miss Defoe, and—and a little prettier, hanged if I don't."

Miss Defoe laughed—not a stage "ha ha," but a genuine laugh. Her black eyes sparkled with humor, and she certainly deserved the honest compliment.

"It's very nice of you to say so, I'm sure."

"Well, I mean every word of it," said John, encouraged by his success.

"Do you? Well, there was something in the valentine—something in the way of verses," continued Miss Defoe. "One couplet ran like this:

"If I but thought that you'd be mine,
I'd like to be your Valentine.

"Then, of course, you meant that also."

Now John had not read the verses. In fact, he had not known that there were any verses at all. He had conceived the sending of a valentine to the leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company as a bold but harmless conceit from which he would never hear a word, but about which he might weave a very pretty romance with which to entertain and surprise his friends. He looked at Miss Defoe, and his embarrassment returned. Still he was not a faint hearted young man, and he admired a woman who could talk like that.

"Did you mean it?" she repeated.

"Yes, by gum, I did," burst out John, with honest intensity.

"Did you really, now? Well, if you did, I might tell you that I've about decided to leave the stage for good."

"Do you mean that you would—you would?"—

"Take you for a valentine?" interrupted Miss Defoe. "I will, and right now."

When the Walkback Dramatic company left town the next day, the leading lady was missing. She wrote a note to the manager, making him a present of the three weeks' salary due her and resigning her position. The wedding took place that next day, and John Brickley says that, although it was a mistake, he has never regretted sending that valentine.

TWO ON ICE.

Tales Told by Washington Manchausens During an Idle Hour.

The group around the fire were talking about skating. "I don't pretend to be much of a skater," said the man with his feet on the mantelpiece. "The last time I indulged in the pastime, though, I had the good luck to slip into an airhole."

"You don't call that good luck, do you?" asked the man who had been trying to break into the conversation and tell a story himself.

"Well, under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't call it good luck," replied the man with his feet on the mantel, "but in this instance it led to my catching the largest fish ever found in this section of the country. It happened this way. I was skating around the airhole, and at last ran plumb into it. The lower part of my body went under the ice, but I was able to hold myself up by the arms. At last a man came to help me out, but one of my skates seemed to have become entangled in something below the surface, and he had to call for assistance. Several persons responded, and by their united efforts pulled me and a four pound rock bass through the airhole. The jaws of the fish were held apart by one of my skate blades. I suppose," he added by way of explanation, "that I must have stuck my foot in his mouth when I first went down."

It was the unuttered consensus of opinion that the raconteur was a liar.

There was a short pause, and the man who had been waiting for a chance told of an adventure on Lake Superior. He said that while skating there one evening, far from shore, he was pursued by a monstrous gray wolf. "The wolf chased me about considerably," he said, "but I wasn't afraid, because I always was a good skater and could beat any wolf that was ever created when it came to getting around on the ice. After I had a little fun with the animal, making 'figure eights' and things like that around him, I thought I would put him to some use. So I made a sudden dash around to his rear and caught hold of his tail with one hand. I had a shinney stick in the other and beat him across the back with it. Well, gentlemen, that beast was so shocked and surprised that he didn't know what to do. He jumped around just like a colt that was being broken in. I held on tight, though, and he finally came to the conclusion that he wanted to go home and lit out for shore.

"Gentlemen, I know you will believe me when I say that that was the supreme moment of my life. There I was holding to that wolf's tail with one hand, beating him with the shinney stick which I held in the other and flying over the glassy surface at the rate of about 40 miles an hour. As we neared the shore he slowed up some, and on reaching the land he lay down and died from exhaustion.

"I have his hide at home now," continued the narrator, "and you can see it if you want to."

This seemed satisfactory proof of the truth of the tale. At least no one questioned it, and the meeting adjourned.—Washington Star.

Too Late In the Day.

"Grandpa," said one of the young persons at the table, "you shouldn't eat your soup that way. Do you notice how I do it?"

"My dear child," replied the old gentleman, "I've been eating it this way, as nearly as I can remember, for 987 years, 11 months and 24 days, and I don't think I'll change my style now to please a great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter with bangs hair."

And Methuselah gazed dreamily out through the walls of the tent into the fathomless void beyond and went on pulling his spoon toward him.—Chicago Tribune.

Came to His Rescue.

In the smoking room at the club the low murmur of a man's voice came soothingly to the ears of his listeners.

"It was a most embarrassing predicament," the voice went on. "She was such a lovely girl, and I had no idea it was so late. I stood there debating with myself, and just then"—

A shudder, which the speaker tried in vain to suppress, shook his frame violently.

"—her father came down stairs and helped me out."

Save for the slow and measured rhythm of popping corks, the silence which followed was expressive in its intensity.—New York World.

A NOVEL CASE

Which Affects the Transportation of Soldiers.

The Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Sues Uncle Sam for $12.50—Local and Personal News.

An Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., gives the following account of an interesting suit: "An important matter was argued in the United States district court this morning in the case of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad vs. the United States. The railroad is ostensibly suing to secure $12 50 for the transportation of a soldier over its line. The real point to be decided is whether the road is a land grant aided road or not. If it is, it is only entitled to half rates for carrying soldiers; if it is not, it can collect full fares. Several counsel for the government appeared and argued the case. The authorities at Washington are much interested, as the decision will affect the rates charged the government on other trans-continental roads. Judge Wellsnor took the matter under advisement. Voluminous briefs have been filed in the case."

RE-ORGANIZATION PLAN PROPOSED.

Winslow S. Pierce, acting for the reorganization committee of the Union Pacific Railroad company, today submitted to the senate committee on Pacific railroads at Washington the reorganization committee's draft of a bill for the re-organization of that road. This bill provides for:

Appointment by the president subject to approval of the senate of a commission of three members to investigate, determine and report to the president the fair cash value of the claim and lien of the United States.

Authority to the commissioners to subpoena and examine witnesses and to have processes of courts.

The report of commissioners or a majority, subject to the approval of the president, is to be conclusive as to the sum which may be paid for the claim and lien of the United States, the secretary of the treasury upon such payment to execute the instrument of assignment of the lien and claim, reserving a sinking fund.

Authority to purchasers to organize a new company, empowered to acquire and operate the lines and the property of the railway company, with such corporate powers as are necessarily involved.

The repeal of the provisions of prior acts which would be inaplicable to the reorganized company under the new conditions and reserving the government's preferred right for the transportation of mails, troops, munitions of war, etc.

Authority and direction to the attorney general, in default of payment of amount fixed by the commission to foreclose the lein of the government, and upon sale to bid to the amount of the indebtedness to the United States.

Reservation of the remedies to the United States and of power to alter, amend or repeal.

FINGER BADLY MANGLED.

He was working about a cross cut saw and got his hand too close to the sharp blade. The flesh of the finger was lacerated and the bone was slivered and amputation may be necessary.

SHADOWS THE PRINCE.

An Anarchist Who is Watched at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Feb. 14—The Italian colony in this city is considerably agitated over the discovery that Pietro Cori, the anarchist, who was said to have incited Santo Caserio to murder President Carnot, is shadowing Prince Luigi, the nephew of King Humbert, of Italy, who arrived here last week on the warship Christophero Columbo. Since the arrival of the prince he has attended a number of social functions given in his honor, and on each occasion a tall, dark complexioned man was noticed. When the identity of the stranger was learned, the prince asked to see the anarchist. When the tall young man was pointed out to him, the prince watched him with a tinge of well-bred curiosity. Gori says he has no particular motive in following the prince about and attended the balls at which King Humbert's nephew was present for the purpose of seeing the ladies. He admitted that he taught Carnot's slayer the principles of anarchy and was himself a hater of royalty, but denied that he had any evil motive in seeking the company of Prince Luigi.

CLAIMING AN ESTATE.

Suit Brought at Terre Haute to Establish an Heirship.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 14—Mrs. Sarah Hahn and her brother, James Mansfield, have filed papers here laying claim to the big Lawrence estate, of New York city. The basis of their claim is that their great-grandfather bought the land of the government when it was comparatively worthless, and upon his removal west left it uncared for to accumulate value. As time passed, the property was entirely forgotten, and its existence was but recently brought to the notice of the old gentleman's descendants through an advertisement for heirs, printed in a New York paper. It is now worth many thousands.

Wagered That He Would Die.

Frankfort, Ind., Feb. 14.—Daniel Dempster, an eccentric character of this city, after making the rounds of the saloons last evening, taking all kinds of bets that he would be a corpse inside of an hour, was found in an alley shortly afterward with his throat cut from ear to ear and bleeding profusely. He had inflicted the wound with the tip of an oyster can. Domestic troubles he claimed were the cause of his attempted suicide. He will probably recover.

WILL FIGHT THE TRUST.

Indiana Farmers Object to Paying 200 Per Cent. Profit and Will Sue.

English, Ind, Feb. 14—A case will likely be aired in the courts of this or Perry county which will go to prove the workings of the coffin trust. The person who bought the coffin was a farmer named Klutinger, who declared that an exorbitant price was charged because he was not in a position to refuse compliance. He took the coffin on credit, but now refuses to pay more than a reasonable profit on the merchant's investment and declares that he can prove that the merchant is charging him 200 per cent. profit and that the merchant has acknowledged this, but declares the trust compels him to do so, and if he refuses the agency will be taken from him.

Proctocol Signed.

New York, Feb. 14.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janerio, Brazil, telegraphs the important information that a proctocol has been signed by the Italian minister and the Brazilian foreign minister, whereby the two countries agree to submit their dispute to the president of the United States. The agreement is similar to that concluded by the former minister, De Martino. It contains additional clauses, however, which are believed to be more favorable to the Italian claimants. There have been thirty three deaths from yellow fever within the last twenty-four hours.

FREE COINAGE TALK.

Mr. Crisp Speaks in Behalf of Silver.

The House Crowded to Its Utmost Seating Capacity to Hear the Closing of the Debate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The public and private galleries of the house were thronged today in anticipation of the closing of the debate on the senate free coinage substitute for the bond bill. The attendance on the floor was also very large. Mr. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, insisted on the regular order as soon as the journal had been read and under the arrangements made yesterday, one hour was allowed on each side for closing. Mr. Crisp, representing free silver, said this was an economic question and no matter what views the members might have entertained in the past, he assumed that in casting his vote today each member would do so conscientiously in accordance with the dictates of his convictions.

Mr. Crisp opened his argument proper with the familiar words, "In 1873 congress demonetized silver. At the very threshold of the subject," he said, "this was denied and it was also denied that up to 1873 we had had bimetallistic in this country." He quoted Baron Rothschild's statement that prices were regulated by the aggregate amount of the circulation, gold and silver. "Prices were fixed by the amount of primary money in the world. If the standard in England was gold, in France silver and in China silver the measure of values would be the combined amount of both gold and silver circulating as money. Money was the thing for which all contended and the sum of the demand for money was equal to the demand for all things else on earth. If a metal was made money by law, a demand for that metal would be created among all the people and its value, would necessarily increase with the increased demand." Here he read from statements made by Senator Sherman in 1876 that the demonetization of silver had caused a reduction of its price and had created a mad scramble for gold on the part of England, France and Germany, which had appreciated its price and had induced a fall in prices throughout the world. That fall of prices, Mr. Crisp asserted, was largely due, he would not say wholly, to the demonetization of silver. It was not the fall of prices that was complained of but the constant and steady fall of prices due to the constant appreciation of gold. He read from Mr. Balfour's speech of the 9th inst. in the English parliament, attributing the decline of agriculture in gold countries to the appreciation of gold and the artificial advantage it gave to silver countries. Mr. Balfour had also declared that the obstacles to reform came not from abroad, but were put forward at home. Continuing, Mr. Crisp affirmed the existence of a well defined purpose by those in authority, both here and abroad, to depress the price of silver in order to prevent its remonitization. He cited the manner in which the Bland-Allison act of 1878 was executed, the coinage of the minimum amount under the act and the refusal of the treasury, after a few months to coin silver under the act of 1890. He cited Secretary Carlisle's refusal to give silver for gold in 1893, "because the silver was needed for the redemption of the treasury notes" And his course a few months afterward in redeeming those notes in gold. "What kind of juggling is that?" he asked. "What sort of friendly treatment of silver is that?" He then directed his attention to the manner in which the parity between the metals had been maintained. Every obligation of the government, bonds, greenbacks and treasury notes, was payable in coin. If that was not true, and they were gold obligations, why did not those who believed that have the courage to say so and save the tax ridden people millions in interest. In February, 1895, congress could have saved the people $16 000,000 in interest by authorizing gold bonds. "Congress refused," said Mr. Crisp. 'We paid sixteen million for the privilege of paying in silver and now you attempt to deny our right to do so."

WARNING FOR A PASTOR.

Threat to Blow Up His House if He Doesn't Leave Saloons Alone.

FOWLER, Ind., Feb. 14.—Rev. Robert G. Hammond, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Amis, received an anonymous threat against his life and family through the mail yesterday morning. The letter said his house would be blown up with dynamite unless he stopped his warfare against the saloons. It occasioned no little excitement and detectives will attempt to discover the writer. About three weeks ago Constable Charles Haver, of this city, was waylaid and brutally beaten. The saloon men profess ignorance and have donated $50 toward detecting the perpetrators.

RIVALS QUARREL.

Both Sought the Affections of Clara Clemens.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Feb. 14.—In the depot at Pocohantas last night, George Gray and Len Hartzook engaged in a quarrel over a woman. Gray shot and killed Hartzook after Hartzook had fired two shots at Gray without effect. During the affray Miss Clara Clemens was shot and seriously injured. Gray escaped.

Weyler's Purpose.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana says: It is learned unofficially that General Weyler will personally take the field very soon. Captain General Weyler's purpose is said to be to place his command between the armies of Gomez and Maceo, in the neighborhood of Quivican, and force one or both to give battle to him.

WINDING UP AFFAIRS.

The Somewhat Dilatory World's Fair Board Meets.

The Diplomas and Medals, Which Number Several Thousand, Now Ready for Distribution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The world's fair board of control, which is the executive body of the Columbian commission, is in session here, transacting various odds and ends of business relating to the Chicago exposition that yet remain undisposed of. One of the board's duties is to officially promulgate the award of the 23,000 to 25,000 medals and diplomas that were awarded to exhibitors at the fair. The cases for the medals have been finished and some kind of a tubular device will be prepared for the safe transmission of the diplomas. It is expected that everything will be ready in less than a month. The action of Director General Davis in making his report to congress instead of first submitting it to the board of control is a source of dissatisfaction and irritating to the members. It is felt by them that etiquette required that this report should have been made to the board in the same manner as those of all the bureaus of other branches. It was not regarded as complete, or slighted any one of the branches of the exposition, or included anything that was not properly within its scope, what was missing could be inserted and the objectionable and unsatisfactory features be changed or eliminated as the board might see fit.

MAHER KNOCKED OUT.

Not by Pugilist Bob, But by Sand in His Eyes.

He Is Totally Blind and Is Kept in a Darkened Room—Will Fight Monday.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 14.—Peter Maher's eyes were a trifle better this morning, but there is no telling yet whether he will or will not be able to enter the ring on Monday. The opinions of the physicians still differ, some maintaining that he will be cut in three days, and others giving him at least a week to remain in his room. Even if Maher is able to enter the ring on Monday, he will not be able to do himself justice. He has been practically out of training for a week and he certainly will be able to do nothing between now and Monday. If the fight comes off on that day Fitzsimmons' chances will be greatly improved. He is in splendid condition. This morning Maher was still looked in the little room in which he was placed last night. The shades were drawn and every ray of light carefully excluded. Hot bags were applied to his eyes at frequent intervals during the night and when he finally dropped off to sleep toward morning a poultice was applied. There is no doubt that he is in a very bad condition. Maher is greatly worried lest the public think he has backed down or the sore eyes are a subterfuge to enable him to avoid going into the ring. Anybody seeing the man's condition could not entertain such an idea for an instant. He is not only utterly unable to see, but so helpless that he cannot care for himself. Connolly, his trainer, said this morning: "If Peter rounds to by Monday there will be a fight as far as we are concerned. We are sure that our man can win even if he has been compelled to let up in his training. He is dead game and more than willing to fight. If he can see when Monday comes around he will get into the ring" Stuart says that he is ready to pull off the fight at any time when the men are ready. "We would be on our way to the battle ground by now," he added, "if Maher had been in any shape at all. I was prepared to pull off the fight today and I am ready to pull it off at any time the principals are ready. There will be no fake on my part when the time comes."

The spot where the battle ground is to be is still a secret. Everybody thinks that it would have been in Mexico, near the line of the Southern Pacific railway, anywhere from fifty to a hundred miles east of El Paso. Nobody knows where it would have been or what conditions may arise, it is claimed, that will permit the fight to come off in Juarez without interference, but this is not likely. The mere suggestion yesterday of such a thing seemed very funny to Governor Ahumuda. "Oh, yes," he said, "right here in the bull pen. Let the gentlemen come. It will be so much easier than chasing them along the banks of the Rio Grande, and then the bull pen is so close to the jail. Nothing could be more convenient. Let them come."

MAHER GOES TO LAS CRUCES.

Peter Maher was taken back to Las Cruces this morning An oculist accompanied the pugilist. He would express no positive opinion as to his patient being able to fight within any specified time.

"There seems to be a little less inflammation this morning," Dr. White said, after looking at the eyes just before the start. "Maher may be able to enter the ring Monday and make a fight."

Six Texas rangers kept guard about Maher's room last night. Two were planted at the foot of the stairs, two across the way and one on each side of the entrance.

Fitzsimmons came over from Juarez to the theater last night. During the performance two Rangers entered the box and told Fitzsimmons he was under arrest. The Australian was frightened, but was told to see the show and go home, as he was not to be taken to jail. After the show Fitzsimmons was escorted to the river by the Rangers. The managers insist the fight will take place. No attempt will be made to bring off any of the other fights before Monday. Many people are leaving the city for home.

THE IRON MARKET.

The Feeling in It Continues Hopeful.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—The Iron Trade Review this week will say: "While there is no pronounced increase in mill tonnage from week to week, the feeling in the iron market continues hopeful. A significant feature is the general steadiness of prices on finished material, with so many mills only partly employed. The confidence that larger demand is not far ahead serves to hold prices where they are, and mills seem unwilling to make the sharp cuts that might result in fuller order books, wanting rather to be in a position to take business at a profit, as the demand grows. Conditions governing the pig iron market have not changed. A production in January in excess of consumption caused some settling of prices on foundry grades, but the lowest prices on southern irons are not made by the largest interests in that section. Reports from the east indicate stationary prices, with more liberal buying of foundry iron. Mills are getting to the point at which more business must be had if the moderate January pace of operations is kept up, but there appears a general belief that the awaited movement will materialize in time to hold the present basis."

BRIGHAM'S VIEWS.

The Master of the National Grange Talks.

General Condition of Farmers Is Not Improved—Free Wool Has Not Benefited Them.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—I. P Brigham, of Delta, Ohio, master of the National Framers' Grange, who is now in this city, speaking of the general condition of the farmers says: "Over the entire country there seems to be a common suffering among farmers and also a very unequality of crops. In some parts of the country the crops have been heavy, but in other sections farmers have been particularly unfortunate. Prices are lower this year than they have ever been. The suffering among farmers all over the country is a great deal worse this year than it has been for years. Prices are lower than they were during the panic of 1893 and 1894 Oats, hay, corn and potatoes are not selling for over half the price that was secured last year. The farmer who was fortunate enough to have large crops is not in an enviable position and the farmer who suffered by small crops is worse off. Their general condition is not encouraging and I cannot see any indication of future prosperity until definite action is taken by the government on tariff and monetary questions. The farmers feel that they were grossly discriminated against when wool was put on the free list and many of them have suffered from this The theory that free wool would benefit us has not been substantiated by results and we have suffered from this among other things."

TURKISH OUTRAGES.

Sad Story Which Comes to a Young Armenian.

MILWAUKEE, Wis, Feb. 14.—Giragos Tomauian is a young Armenian of this city, who has just received sad news from home. The young man is almost prostrated by a letter which he received from his uncle, Khiatjain Tomauian written December 21, 1895, in the village of Ouzounaba, Palsus, province of Diarbekir, Armenia This place is twenty days distant from Constantinople by horse. The letter says: "I wrote you the horrible happenings which are unequalled in the history of our village. Brother, they have struck our quiet village; they have burned our church and our home and robbed us of everything They have killed nearly every one. Those who are left have changed their religion and have become Mohammedans. But this is not all. Let me write and relate about your home. Your brother's wife and your little boy are killed. Your wife and mother have thrown themselves into the Euphrates in order to save themselves from the Turkish outrages Your sister is living yet, but I wish she might have been killed with the rest, for they have taken her and married her to a Kurd and have changed religion to Mohammedanism. The massacre continued for three days Very few of us are left now in the village."

NEGRO HANGED.

Murdered His Neighbor Without Provocation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—John, alias "Patsy" Harris, a negro murderer, was hanged in the District of Columbia jail at 11:37 this morning

The crime for which John, alias "Patsy" Harris today paid the death penalty was committed on the afternoon of July 4th last, in that portion of Georgetown known as "Boston." Matthew Spruell, the murdered man, and Harris, both colored, lived in the same house, together with their families. On the day of the murder Harris came home under the influence of liquor, and understanding his wife to say that Spruell had refused to speak to her, immediately started out looking for trouble. He found Spruell in a barber shop and fired at the wall of the room merely, he says, to scare him. Spruell becoming frightened, ran into the street, pursued by Harris, who fired upon him with fatal effect. There was little or no provocation for the murder, although Harris claimed on the witness stand that Spruell at first made an assault upon him with a razor. Harris was twenty-five years of age and leaves a wife and child.

Wants to Prove She is Part Negro.

MUNCIE, Ind, Feb. 14—James Walker, colored, and his wife, who was Miss Hallie Shaffer, white, were in the police court on the charge of unlawfully marrying. Mayor Cromer withheld his decision and they were returned to jail, not being able to furnish bond for $1 000. Miscegenation in Indiana is a felony punishable by a fine of $1,000 and ten years' imprisonment. The woman says her grandfather was a negro and that his wife was a white woman. Walker's father was thought to be a white man. Mrs Walker says she will prove that she is part negro.

IDENTIFIED THE HAT.

Miss Bryan's Parents Recognize Her Headgear.

The Canal Being Dragged in the Hopes of Finding the Head of the Murdered Girl.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14.—The authorities here have a letter from Greencastle, Ind., in which the parents of Pearl Bryan identify the hat sent to them as that of Pearl, and give other information that has lead to all the officers being employed today in searching for the head. The canal was drained during the night and different sections of workmen have examined its muddy bottom, but nothing has been found up to noon, although the whole course of the canal was examined. The officers think now that the hat found near the body was that of Pearl, that she was knocked senseless and that the head was probably badly beaten up before it was cut off. Everything is being done to get all the evidence available on this side of the river, so as to turn Jackson and Walling over to the Kentucky authorities tomorrow.

A special from Frankfort, Ky., says: "Governor Bradley has been examing the cases today and requested Sheriff Plummer to return to Newport, Ky., for additional papers and evidence and that he would then issue the requisition tomorrow Sheriff Plummer left for Frankfort at noon and will return tomorrow, but it is not expected that Jackson and Walling will not be transferred until next week, as their lawyers will go to Governor Bushnell to contest the requisition.

PICKPOCKETS

Operate Among High School Scholars.

Numerous Petty Thefts Occur in the Cloak Rooms During the School Hours.

The scholars of the High school, on East Wayne street, have for the last few weeks been the victims of petty pick pockets. Numerous times lately small amounts of money have been stolen from them during school hours.

The thefts have been committed in the cloak rooms A number of the young lady scholars get their noonday lunches down town each day, and for this purpose they carry a small amount of change They leave their money in their coat pockets in the cloak rooms. Frequently, of late, these pockets have been picked. Today one young lady looked for her lunch money and found it gone. To a SENTINEL reporter she said she had been robbed several times before, having lost, altogether, about $2 50. Several other girls standing near added that others had suffered in a similar manner, some of them being among the victims.

An effort is being made to capture the thief, but thus far it has been unsuccessful.

It is hoped he may be caught and thieving thus be stopped.

GENERAL WEYLER says he will give the Cubans eight days to lay down their arms and surrender. The Cubans think that it will take General Weyler about eight years to make them do it.

DID you get your valentine, and do you know who sent it?

IF Mr. Hunter could get five more votes he would be the next United States senator from Kentucky—so near, and yet so far

THE New York Herald wants "the United States to go slow in recognizing belligerent rights of Cubans." According to our way of thinking, that's just what we have been doing—too awfully slow.

SENATOR QUAY announces that he is in the presidential race to stay. Well, the other fellows—McKinley, Reed, Allison and the rest, feel the same way, and this will make it lively in the republican national convention.

THE Maher Fitzsimmons prize fight it is now announced, has been postponed until Monday, because Maher's eyes are inflamed. If that fight comes off, his eyes will be in a good deal worse condition than they are now, after Fitzsimmons gets through with him.

MR GLADSTONE is not yet again in the British parliament, there is only the rumor that he has determined despite his age, to return. It is only for the cause of Armenia, and the fact that she has been forsaken in the hour of her crucifixion by Great Britain and by all the powers of Europe, that at this period in his life could induce him to even think of re entering the great world-arena of debate.

MR AMOS R. WALTERS, of this city, was elected vice president of the State Lincoln league, and Mr. E K. Dorr is a delegate at large to the national meeting of Lincoln league clubs. H. Magley, of Columbia City.

MASSACHUSETTS is in the throes of a campaign to change the state constitution so as to provide for biennial elections and legislatures. The opposition to the change is very vigorous based on the argument that frequent elections insure greater fidelity on the part of public officers, who are called to accountability at frequent intervals of time, while biennial elections place the officers and legislatures farther away from the people. This is a very strong argument, but it has been made without avail in all the states that have adopted the biennial system. Massachusetts is one of the very few remaining states which adhere to the annual system.

THE state census recently completed in Kansas shows a decrease of 97 000, compared with the census of 1890 Taking into account the natural increase of its population, it is evident that at least 150 000 people have moved out of Kansas since 1890, and more are going. This migration is attributed to the long continued drought and bad crops. Efforts are being made to attract some of the people of the large cities to Kansas, but the movement does not seem to succeed very well. It looks as if Kansas would have to be able to point to several good crops before it can hope to add any considerable number of desirable settlers to its population.

BANKRUPTCY bills are pending in both houses of congress, but, as has been the case in several previous congresses, it is by no means certain that the interest in the matter will crystallize in legislation. The judiciary committee of both houses are considering bills. In the house it is likely that a measure similar to the Torrey bill, which has heretofore been in evidence, will pass. Such a bill is now before a sub committee. There is a controversy in the committee as to whether both voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy shall be provided for. Two members of the committee stand wide apart on this question, but it is said that there may be a compromise between them on the basis of involuntary bankruptcy in cases of fraud.

The North Pole.

If the report is true that the north pole has been found, it is a very important discovery, for by it that has been accomplished which men have been seeking for hundreds of years. It will be of no special scientific value except the fact of having discovered the north pole. There is no difference there from any other point on the earth's surface except that it is at the pole or the stationary point on the earth's axis, from which every direction is south. It would simply be a scientific satisfaction to know that that much talked of region had been visited and explored by man.

Many brave men have tried to find the north pole, and many have been the lives lost in these efforts. At first there was some rational excuse for the risk taken in casting one's self away on the great desert of ice north of the arctic circle Early in the century navigators had strange notions about the northwestern passage, but of late years the discovery of the north pole has come to be a mere matter of sentiment. It may be that Dr Nansen will have discovered something of importance to the pole, but few believe that beyond the gratification of curiosity, with a report that "the north star is directly overhead, or near it," or that "the pole is surrounded by ice or by an open sea, much will be added to the sum of human knowledge

Useful or not, wise or not, scientific or not, possible or not, the discovery of the pole is, or was, a necessity that, once set up, had to be complied with. The most remarkable work done in this line has been of recent years Not more than a dozen of the many expeditions that set out with great ado have accomplished anything worthy of mention, and for each actual voyage of exploration there have been numerous search or relief expeditions. In the case of the Franklin expedition, for instance, no less than forty different attempts were made to rescue or at least learn the fate of the party.

Among the most notable voyages of discovery were these, mentioned below in chronological order.

1827—Captain Parry reached latitude 82 45
1827—Captain Ross (with the Victory) lost in the ice, reached latitude 81 27.
1845—Sir John Franklin (with the Erebus and Terror) lost in the ice.
1853—Dr. Kane (Advance) reached latitue 80 35.
1871—Captain Peterman (Hansa) 81.05
1871—Captain Hall (Polaris) 82 16.
1876—Captain Nares (Alert and Discovery), 83 10
1879—Lieutenant De Long (Jeannette), lost, 72.15.
1881—Lieutenant Greely (Proteus), 83.20.
1891—Lieutenant Peary (Kite), 83.24.
1892—Bjoring and Kalahmins (Ripple), lost; 76 40.
1893—Lieutenant Peary (Falcon), 82 34.

It is believed by many students of arctic matters that Dr. Nansen has not drifted nearer the pole than the eightieth parallel of latitude, or 600 miles from the goal for which he has risked his life. He may now be fast in the ice in the latitude of northern Spitzbergen or southern Franz Josef Land, and if this should prove to be the case he will only have four or five hundred miles to travel to reach Siberia. If he has met with difficulty and turned back in time, before the strength of his men has become exhausted by the long vigils and many deprivations of the Arctic nights, he may yet succeed in reaching civilization with the survivors of his party.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Act Preventing Garnishment Said to Have Been Evaded.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Feb. 14 —Three suits were filed here yesterday that are said to be the only ones of the kind ever brought in the state. Robert Green, an engineer on the Panhandle, is the plaintiff and the several defendants are the Logan Milling company, David C. Beatty, a fruit dealer, and T. M. Quigley & Co, candy manufacturers.

This is a strong labor union city, and several years ago a business block was built by non-union workmen. The result was that every labor union boycotted the building and would buy nothing from the occupants or from any person who encouraged them One or two men began business in the building, but all failed after a short time. One of these was Charles Chidester, a son-in law of Green. Green loaned him $2 000 to begin business, and in a short time he was $3 000 in debt, and had a stock worth but $2 300. Green then assumed the debts and took the stock and closed the business. The defendants mentioned above then sold their accounts to G O. Smith, a lawyer of Wheeling, W. Va, who brought suit against the railroad company at Wheeling as garnishee defendant and collected the amounts from Green's wages.

It is alleged that by selling the accounts out of the state the defendants evaded the law, which prohibits garnishment, and allows a householder exemption on $600 worth of property The present suits are brought to recover damages accrued from this evasion. The case is attracting a great deal of attention among lawyers, and will be carried to the supreme court before a final settlement can be made

All wise men should read the great advertisement of the new firm, A. K. Hurst & Co, proprietors of the Globe

Big Bequest.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—A bequest of $50,000 has been made to the college for women of the Western Reserve university by Mrs. S. V. Harkness, of New York, one of the heirs of the Harkness estate of this city. The gift is given towards the establishment of a chair of biblical literature in the institution, and the entire amount will be at the disposal of the college within the present year.

Jury's Verdict.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14—The jury in the Holliday damage case brought in a verdict which awarded damages to Mrs Fannie Holliday in the sum of $500 for malicious prosecution. The case attracted considerable attention from the fact that Mrs. E. L. Holliday, who was a co-defendant with her husband, was a daughter of the late Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio.

FATE IN FEBRUARY.

[A Valentine.]

When all the fields are white with snow,
And February's sun is fair,
With Leila's dimpled face aglow,
What care I for the winter air?

Companioned so within the sleigh,
Her silver voice is cheer enough,
And while the horses speed away
One hand I clasp within the muff.

Her lily lidded, azure eyes
Add to the quick, electric thrill,
For now two human destinies
Depend upon a maiden's will.

The friendly south wind's soft caress
Bespeaks a solution fair,
And one unruly, roguish tress
Falls where it banishes despair.

Upon a wayside orchard bole
We note the frisky chickadee.
He seems to say, "Upon my soul,
Two precious fools, oh, see, oh, see!"

What would he give if, from its bark,
He could ascend to joy like this,
Or, when the evening shades grow dark,
Imprint the repetitious kiss?

Dear Leila, though the spring delay,
And all the summer turn to snow,
Our lives are pledged to endless May,
And nothing else I care to know.

THE LEADING LADY.

A VALENTINE DAY SKETCH.

[Copyright, 1896, by American Press Association.]

Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company, was in a very bad humor as she stepped off the train at Groveville. The weather had something to do with it, no doubt. It was weather such as the English describe as "beastly," yet it was characteristic of February.

But the weather was not all to blame. Miss Defoe had been a leading lady for three months, and she was thoroughly disgusted with the stage. She had worked for several years with this ambition in view, and now that she had reached it she wished that her lot had been cast anywhere but on the stage.

The prospect was certainly not alluring. The tour of the Walkback Dramatic company had not been successful. Salaries had not been paid since the first week out, and now there was a possibility that the entire combination would be stranded in some out of the way nook on the New England circuit.

She envied the young women whom she saw in the cheerful homes she passed by in her walk to the barnlike hotel. They had fond mothers and kind fathers probably and friends whom they had known for years. They did not have to travel all day in drafty, uncomfortable cars, eat their meals at railroad restaurants and wonder on what day they would be left penniless among strangers.

Yet she realized that these same young women envied her.

"Fools, every one," she muttered to herself and followed the rest of the company into the hotel.

In fact, a good many people in Groveville were feeling rather sour that day. The rain that had begun at daylight was still falling steadily and was turning the snow into slush that seemed to exert a dampening and chilling influence over everything and everybody.

John Brickley was perhaps the most cheerful man in town. Just why we will see later. Let us state right here that the dead walls and board fences of Groveville had announced for seven successive days that on Feb. 14 the Walkback Dramatic company, "a grand aggregation of histrionic stars," would present the ever popular drama of "Fanchon, the Cricket," in the opera house.

The prophecy of the posters had come to pass. It was St. Valentine's day, and the Walkback Dramatic company was here The citizens did not seem to be unduly excited over the fact, however. The "histrionic stars" themselves were soon made aware of this. Their information came from the manager soon after his return from a visit to the local celebrity described on the programmes as "lessee and manager."

"Well, what luck?" inquired the leading man as the manager deposited his dripping umbrella in a corner of the hotel corridor.

"Same as usual, d—n poor. Small advance sales. Probably won't have $50 in the house tonight."

"Even the weather's against us," dolefully remarked the leading man.

"Yes, and everything else. Let's go get a drink."

And they did

John Brickley didn't care a snap for the weather. He had said so a dozen times that afternoon to the customers who had come splashing in out of the wet. Why should he? In the center of his well stocked grocery a big salamander stove blazed away cheerfully and he was warm and dry.

"HERE'S A PACKAGE FOR YOU, THEN."

Besides this, John was something of a philosopher. So is any man who has been successful. It comes easy when fortune smiles. And John considered that fortune had smiled on him. He had a good business, a neat bank account and nothing to worry him. John helped himself to a cigar from the showcase, swung himself into an easy position on the counter and fell to gazing at a lithograph which hung in his store window. It was a picture of Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company.

"Mighty handsome young lady," John soliloquized. "Hanged if I don't shut up early tonight and go to see that show."

John continued to gaze at the picture. He had very little else to do, as customers were scarce

John's gazing ended in his making another determination' He felt quite pleased and not a little astonished with himself after he had made it. He chuckled frequently as he ate his supper that night.

"I wonder what the fellows will say to that?" he remarked audibly. Evidently he had matured a scheme in his mind and was picturing the surprise of his friends when he should relate it to them

John Brickley was quite a favorite among the young men in town He went to Boston several times a year and had even spent a week in New York No one doubted that he could have married almost any girl in the village had he so chosen. But he didn't choose. He said he was going to look around a little before he got married.

So John Brickley, being highly satisfied with himself, was convinced that his scheme, whatever it was, was a brilliant and original one. However, it did not interfere with his attending the production of "Fanchon, the Cricket," at the opera house that evening.

He was there in a front seat and a component part of the slim audience that awaited the rise of the curtain.

Behind the footlights there was gloom. The "histrionic stars" were, as a local scene shifter expressed it, "readin the riot act to the boss." They were making a combined onslaught on the manager.

Miss Blanche Defoe was just having her say.

"If the ghost don't walk within a week, I'm going to shake the whole business, and that's a straight tip. See?" she concluded with an angry stamp of her foot.

"You'll find the walking bad," retorted the manager with a weak attempt at a laugh.

Miss Defoe did not consider this ancient joke worthy of a reply, but marched off haughtily to the back of the stage and sat down on a trunk.

Just then an usher came in from the front of the house and asked for Miss Defoe.

"That's me, 'she said.

"Here's a package for you, then."

'Now I wonder what this is," she said as she read the address and noticed that there were no postage stamps on the parcel.

"Why don't you open it and see?" remarked the "leading old lady," who had just joined her.

"Good idea," and Miss Defoe proceeded to break the string and tear off the paper wrapping. A pasteboard box was disclosed, and on the cover was written:

"From a fond admirer."

Miss Defoe took off the cover and lifted out a gorgeous creation of blue satin, silk cords and paper lace.

"A valentine, by all that's tragic," she exclaimed.

"And a very pretty one, too," said the leading old lady. "You must have made a hit, my dear."

"All up for the first scene," was the call which interrupted further discussion of the valentine and its mysterious sender.

Miss Defoe went on and capered through the first act as Fanchon with considerably more spirit than any of the other members of the cast could muster. She was thinking of something besides her lines, though.

When the act was over, she took advantage of the wait which the inexperienced scene shifter caused and sent for the usher who had brought her the valentine.

"Do you know the person who sent that package to me?" she asked.

The usher did. He knew all about him and was most happy to give Miss Defoe all the details concerning John Brickley. He even pointed out to her the unsuspecting John through a peephole in the curtain.

"Come back here after the next act," said Miss Defoe to the usher. "I want you to take a note to him."

Miss Defoe was a young lady who could act with great promptness on occasions.

The note was duly delivered, and as a result John Brickley found himself waiting in the parlor of the hotel at 11:15 p. m. that same night, his heart beating somewhat rapidly, but with a determination to see the thing through.

When the actress swept in, clothed in a neat fitting tailor made suit, John felt the last bit of his self possession slipping away from him. He had always been free from embarrassment when in the company of any of the village belles, but before this dashing young woman it was different. Miss Defoe, however, quickly broke the ice.

"Is it you I have to thank for the very pretty valentino I received this evening?" she asked, with a gracious smile.

"WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE ORIGINAL?"

"Why, yes. I—er—I took the liberty."

"It was very kind of you to remember me."

"I—I had seen your picture," said John hesitatingly, "and I thought you were very—that is—I admired it, and—and"—

"I see," said Miss Defoe, with an effective little laugh "Well, what do you think of the original?"

John's face grew very red at this frank question, but he was equal to the emergency.

"I think you're just as pretty as the picture, Miss Defoe, and—and a little prettier, hanged if I don't."

Miss Defoe laughed—not a stage "ha ha," but a genuine laugh. Her black eyes sparkled with humor, and she certainly deserved the honest compliment.

"It's very nice of you to say so, I'm sure."

"Well, I mean every word of it," said John, encouraged by his success.

"Do you? Well, there was something in the valentine—something in the way of verses," continued Miss Defoe. "One couplet ran like this:

"If I but thought that you'd be mine,
I'd like to be your Valentine.

"Then, of course, you meant that also."

Now John had not read the verses. In fact, he had not known that there were any verses at all. He had conceived the sending of a valentine to the leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company as a bold but harmless conceit from which he would never hear a word, but about which he might weave a very pretty romance with which to entertain and surprise his friends. He looked at Miss Defoe, and his embarrassment returned. Still he was not a faint hearted young man, and he admired a woman who could talk like that.

"Did you mean it?" she repeated.

"Yes, by gum, I did," burst out John, with honest intensity.

"Did you really, now? Well, if you did, I might tell you that I've about decided to leave the stage for good."

"Do you mean that you would—you would"—

"Take you for a valentine?" interrupted Miss Defoe. "I will, and right now."

When the Walkback Dramatic company left town the next day, the leading lady was missing. She wrote a note to the manager, making him a present of the three weeks' salary due her and resigning her position. The wedding took place that next day, and John Brickley says that, although it was a mistake, he has never regretted sending that valentine.

GROCERIES

TWO ON ICE.

Tales Told by Washington Munchausens During an Idle Hour.

The group around the fire were talking about skating. "I don't pretend to be much of a skater," said the man with his feet on the mantelpiece. "The last time I indulged in the pastime, though, I had the good luck to slip into an airhole."

"You don't call that good luck, do you?" asked the man who had been trying to break into the conversation and tell a story himself.

"Well, under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't call it good luck," replied the man with his feet on the mantel, "but in this instance it led to my catching the largest fish ever found in this section of the country. It happened this way. I was skating around the airhole, and at last ran plumb into it. The lower part of my body went under the ice, but I was able to hold myself up by the arms. At last a man came to help me out, but one of my skates seemed to have become entangled in something below the surface, and he had to call for assistance. Several persons responded, and by their united efforts pulled me and a four pound rock bass through the airhole. The jaws of the fish were held apart by one of my skate blades. I suppose," he added by way of explanation, "that I must have stuck my foot in his mouth when I first went down."

It was the unutterable consensus of opinion that the raconteur was a liar.

There was a short pause, and the man who had been waiting for a chance told of an adventure on Lake Superior. He said that while skating there one evening, far from shore, he was pursued by a monstrous gray wolf. "The wolf chased me about considerably," he said, "but I wasn't afraid, because I always was a good skater and could beat any wolf that was ever created when it came to getting around on the ice. After I had a little fun with the animal, making 'figure eights' and things like that around him, I thought I would put him to some use. So I made a sudden dash around to his rear and caught hold of his tail with one hand. I had a shinney stick in the other and, beat him across the back with it. Well, gentlemen, that beast was so shocked and surprised that he didn't know what to do. He jumped around just like a colt that was being broken in. I held on tight, though, and he finally came to the conclusion that he wanted to go home and lit out for shore.

"Gentlemen, I know you will believe me when I say that that was the supreme moment of my life. There I was holding to that wolf's tail with one hand, beating him with the shinney stick which I held in the other and flying over the glassy surface at the rate of about 40 miles an hour. As we neared the shore he slowed up some, and on reaching the land he lay down and died from exhaustion.

"I have his hide at home now," continued the narrator, "and you can see it if you want to."

This seemed satisfactory proof of the truth of the tale. At least no one questioned it, and the meeting adjourned.—Washington Star.

Too Late In the Day.

"Grandpa," said one of the young persons at the table, "you shouldn't eat your soup that way. Do you notice how I do it?"

"My dear child," replied the old gentleman, "I've been eating it this way, as nearly as I can remember, for 967 years, 11 months and 24 days, and I don't think I'll change my style now to please a great-great-great-great-great-great - great - great-great-granddaughter with banged hair."

And Methuselah gazed dreamily out through the walls of the tent into the fathomless void beyond and went on pulling his spoon toward him.—Chicago Tribune.

Came to His Rescue.

In the smoking room at the club the low murmur of a man's voice came soothingly to the ears of his listeners.

"It was a most embarrassing predicament," the voice went on. "She was such a lovely girl, and I had no idea it was so late. I stood there debating with myself, and just then"—

A shudder, which the speaker tried in vain to suppress, shook his frame violently.

—"her father came down stairs and helped me out."

Save for the slow and measured rhythm of popping corks the silence which followed was expressive in its intensity.—New York World.

A NOVEL CASE

Which Affects the Transportation of Soldiers.

The Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Sues Uncle Sam for $12.50—Local and Personal News.

An Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., gives the following account of an interesting suit: "An important matter was argued in the United States district court this morning in the case of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad vs. the United States. The railroad is ostensibly suing to secure $12 50 for the transportation of a soldier over its line. The real point to be decided is whether the road is a land grant aided road or not. If it is, it is only entitled to half rates for carrying soldiers; if it is not, it can collect full fares. Several counsel for the government appeared and argued the case. The authorities at Washington are much interested, as the decision will affect the rates charged the government on other trans-continental roads. Judge Wellnor took the matter under advisement. Voluminous briefs have been filed in the case."

RE-ORGANIZATION PLAN PROPOSED.

Winslow S. Pierce, acting for the reorganization committee of the Union Pacific Railroad company, today submitted to the senate committee on Pacific railroads at Washington the reorganization committee's draft of a bill for the re-organization of that road. This bill provides for:

Appointment by the president subject to approval of the senate of a commission of three members to investigate, determine and report to the president the fair cash value of the claim and lien of the United States.

Authority to the commissioners to subpoena and examine witnesses and to have processes of courts.

SHADOWS THE PRINCE.

An Anarchist Who Is Watched at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14—The Italian colony in this city is considerably agitated over the discovery that Pietro Cori, the anarchist, who was said to have incited Santo Caserio to murder President Carnot, is shadowing Prince Luigi, the nephew of King Humbert, of Italy, who arrived here last week on the warship Christophero Columbo. Since the arrival of the prince he has attended a number of social functions given in his honor, and on each occasion a tall, dark complexioned man was noticed. When the identity of the stranger was learned, the prince asked to see the anarchist. When the tall young man was pointed out to him, the prince watched him with a tinge of well-bred curiosity. Gori says he has no particular motive in following the prince about and attended the balls at which King Humbert's nephew was present for the purpose of seeing the ladies. He admitted that he taught Carnot's slayer the principles of anarchy and was himself a hater of royalty, but denied that he had any evil motive in seeking the company of Prince Luigi.

CLAIMING AN ESTATE.

Suit Brought at Terre Haute to Establish an Heirship.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Feb. 14—Mrs Sarah Hahn and her brother, James Mansfield, have filed papers here laying claim to the big Lawrence estate, of New York city. The basis of their claim is that their great grandfather bought the land of the government when it was comparatively worthless, and upon his removal west left it uncared for to accumulate value. As time passed, the property was entirely forgotten, and its existence was but recently brought to the notice of the old gentleman's descendants through an advertisement for heirs, printed in a New York paper. It is now worth many thousands.

Wagered That He Would Die.

FRANKFORT, Ind., Feb. 14—Daniel Dempster, an eccentric character of this city, after making the rounds of the saloons last evening, taking all kinds of bets that he would be a corpse inside of an hour, was found in an alley shortly afterward with his throat cut from ear to ear and bleeding profusely. He had inflicted the wound with the tip of an oyster can. Domestic troubles he claimed were the cause of his attempted suicide. He will probably recover.

WILL FIGHT THE TRUST.

Indiana Farmers Object to Paying 200 Per Cent. Profit and Will Sue.

ENGLISH, Ind, Feb. 14—A case will likely be aired in the courts of this or Perry county which will go to prove the workings of the coffin trust. The person who bought the coffin was a farmer named Klutinger, who declared that an exorbitant price was charged because he was not in a position to refuse compliance. He took the coffin on credit, but now refuses to pay more than a reasonable profit on the merchant's investment and declares that he can prove that the merchant is charging him 200 per cent. profit and that the merchant has acknowledged this, but declares the trust compels him to do so, and if he refuses the agency will be taken from him.

FREE COINAGE TALK.

Mr. Crisp Speaks in Behalf of Silver.

The House Crowded to its Utmost Seating Capacity to Hear the Closing of the Debate.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The public and private galleries of the house were thronged today in anticipation of the closing of the debate on the senate free coinage substitute for the bond bill. The attendance on the floor was also very large. Mr. Dingley, chairman of the ways and means committee, insisted on the regular order as soon as the journal had been read and under the arrangements made yesterday, one hour was allowed on each side for closing. Mr. Crisp, representing free silver, said this was an economic question and no matter what views the members might have entertained in the past, he assumed that in casting his vote today each member would do so conscientiously in accordance with the dictates of his convictions.

Mr. Crisp opened his argument proper with the familiar words, "In 1873 congress demonetized silver. At the very threshold of the subject," he said, "this was denied and it was also denied that up to 1873 we had had bimetallistic in this country." He quoted Baron Rothschild's statement that prices were regulated by the aggregate amount of the circulation, gold and silver. "Prices were fixed by the amount of primary money in the world. If the standard in England was gold, in France silver and in China silver the measure of values would be the combined amount of both gold and silver circulating as money. Money was the thing for which all contended and the sum of the demand for money was equal to the demand for all things else on earth. If a metal was made money by law, a demand for that metal would be created among all the people and its value would necessarily increase with the increased demand." Here he read from statements made by Senator Sherman in 1876 that the demonetization of silver had caused a reduction of its price and had created a mad scramble for gold on the part of England, France and Germany, which had appreciated its price and had induced a fall in prices throughout the world. That fall of prices, Mr. Crisp asserted, was largely due, he would not say wholly, to the demonetization of silver. It was not the fall of prices that was complained of but the constant and steady fall of prices due to the constant appreciation of gold. He read from Mr. Balfour's speech of the 9th inst. in the English parliament, attributing the decline of agriculture in gold countries to the appreciation of gold and the artificial advantage it gave to silver countries. Mr. Balfour had also declared that the obstacles to reform came not from abroad, but were put forward at home. Continuing, Mr. Crisp affirmed the existence of a well defined purpose by those in authority, both here and abroad, to depress the price of silver in order to prevent its remonitization. He cited the manner in which the Bland-Allison act of 1878 was executed, the coinage of the minimum amount under the act and the refusal of the treasury, after a few months to coin silver under the act of 1890. He cited Secretary Carlisle's refusal to give silver for gold in 1893, "because the silver was needed for the redemption of the treasury notes." And his course a few months afterward in redeeming those notes in gold. "What kind of juggling is that?" he asked. "What sort of friendly treatment of silver is that?" He then directed his attention to the manner in which the parity between the metals had been maintained. Every obligation of the government, bonds, greenbacks and treasury notes, was payable in coin. If that was not true, and they were gold obligations, why did not those who believed that have the courage to say so and save the tax ridden people millions in interest. In February, 1895, congress could have saved the people $16,000,000 in interest by authorizing gold bonds. "Congress refused," said Mr. Crisp. "We paid sixteen million for the privilege of paying in silver and now you attempt to deny our right to do so."

WARNING FOR A PASTOR.

Threat to Blow Up His House if He Doesn't Leave Saloons Alone.

FOWLER, Ind., Feb. 14.—Rev. Robert G. Hammond, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church at Amis, received an anonymous threat against his life and family through the mail yesterday morning. The letter said his house would be blown up with dynamite unless he stopped his warfare against the saloons. It occasioned no little excitement and detectives will attempt to discover the writer. About three weeks ago Constable Charles Haver, of this city, was waylaid and brutally beaten. The saloon men profess ignorance and have donated $50 toward detecting the perpetrators.

RIVALS QUARREL.

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Feb. 14.—In the depot at Pocohantas last night, George Gray and Len Hartzook engaged in a quarrel over a woman. Gray shot and killed Hartzook after Hartzook had fired two shots at Gray without effect. During the affray Miss Clara Clemens was shot and seriously injured. Gray escaped.

Weyler's Purpose.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—A dispatch to the Herald from Havana says: It is learned unofficially that General Weyler will personally take the field very soon. Captain General Weyler's purpose is said to be to place his command between the armies of Gomez and Maceo, in the neighborhood of Quivican, and force one or both to give battle to him.

WINDING UP AFFAIRS.

The Somewhat Dilatory World's Fair Board Meets.

The Diplomas and Medals, Which Number Several Thousand, Now Ready for Distribution.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The world's fair board of control, which is the executive body of the Columbian commission, is in session here, transacting various odds and ends of business relating to the Chicago exposition that yet remain undisposed of. One of the board's duties is to officially promulgate the award of the 23,000 to 25,000 medals and diplomas that were awarded to exhibitors at the fair. The cases for the medals have been finished and some kind of a tubular device will be prepared for the safe transmission of the diplomas. It is expected that everything will be ready in less than a month. The action of Director General Davis in making his report to congress instead of first submitting it to the board of control is a source of dissatisfaction and irritating to the members. It is felt by them that etiquette required that this report should have been made to the board in the same manner as those of all the bureaus of other branches. It was not regarded as complete, or slighted any one of the branches of the exposition, or included anything that was not properly within its scope, what was missing could be inserted and the objectionable and unsatisfactory features be changed or eliminated as the board might see fit.

MAHER KNOCKED OUT.

Not by Pugilist Bob, But by Sand in His Eyes.

He is Totally Blind and is Kept in a Darkened Room—Will Fight Monday.

EL PASO, Texas, Feb. 14.—Peter Maher's eyes were a trifle better this morning, but there is no telling yet whether he will or will not be able to enter the ring on Monday. The opinions of the physicians still differ, some maintaining that he will be cut in three days, and others giving him at least a week to remain in his room. Even if Maher is able to enter the ring on Monday, he will not be able to do himself justice. He has been practically out of training for a week and he certainly will be able to do nothing between now and Monday. If the fight comes off on that day Fitzsimmons' chances will be greatly improved. He is in splendid condition. This morning Maher was still locked in the little room in which he was placed last night. The shades were drawn and every ray of light carefully excluded. Hot bags were applied to his eyes at frequent intervals during the night and when he finally dropped off to sleep toward morning a poultice was applied. There is no doubt that he is in a very bad condition. Maher is greatly worried lest the public think he has backed down or the sore eyes are a subterfuge to enable him to avoid going into the ring. Anybody seeing the man's condition could not entertain such an idea for an instant. He is not only utterly unable to see, but so helpless that he cannot care for himself. Connolly, his trainer, said this morning: "If Peter rounds to by Monday there will be a fight as far as we are concerned. We are sure that our man can win even if he has been compelled to let up in his training. He is dead game and more than willing to fight. If he can see when Monday comes around he will get into the ring." Stuart says that he is ready to pull off the fight at any time when the men are ready. "We would be on our way to the battle ground by now," he added, "if Maher had been in any shape at all. I was prepared to pull off the fight today and I am ready to pull it off at any time the principals are ready. There will be no fake on my part when the time comes."

The spot where the battle ground is to be is still a secret. Everybody thinks that it would have been in Mexico, near the line of the Southern Pacific railway, anywhere from fifty to a hundred miles east of El Paso. Nobody knows where it would have been or what conditions may arise, it is claimed, that will permit the fight to come off in Jaurez without interference, but this is not likely. The mere suggestion yesterday of such a thing seemed very funny to Governor Ahumada. "Oh, yes," he said, "right here in the bull pen. Let the gentlemen come. It will be so much easier than chasing them along the banks of the Rio Grande, and then the bull pen is so close to the jail. Nothing could be more convenient. Let them come."

MAHER GOES TO LAS CRUCES.

Peter Maher was taken back to Las Cruces this morning. An occulist accompanied the pugilist. He would express no positive opinion as to his patient being able to fight within any specified time.

"There seems to be a little less inflammation this morning," Dr. White said, after looking at the eyes just before the start. "Maher may be able to enter the ring Monday and make a fight."

Six Texas rangers kept guard about Maher's room last night. Two were planted at the foot of the stairs, two across the way and one on each side of the entrance.

Fitzsimmons came over from Juarez to the theater last night. During the performance two Rangers entered the box and told Fitzsimmons he was under arrest. The Australian was frightened, but was told to see the show and go home, as he was not to be taken to jail. After the show Fitzsimmons was escorted to the river by the Rangers. The managers insist the fight will take place. No attempt will be made to bring off any of the other fights before Monday. Many people are leaving the city for home.

THE IRON MARKET.

The Feeling in It Continues Hopeful.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—The Iron Trade Review this week will say: "While there is no pronounced increase in mill tonnage from week to week, the feeling in the iron market continues hopeful. A significant feature is the general steadiness of prices on finished material, with so many mills only partly employed. The confidence that larger demand is not far ahead serves to hold prices where they are, and mills seem unwilling to make the sharp cuts that might result in fuller order books, wanting rather to be in a position to take business at a profit, as the demand grows. Conditions governing the pig iron market have not changed. A production in January in excess of consumption caused some settling of prices on foundry grades, but the lowest prices on southern irons are not made by the largest interests in that section. Reports from the east indicate stationary prices, with more liberal buying of foundry iron. Mills are getting to the point at which more business must be had if the moderate January pace of operations is kept up, but there appears a general belief that the awaited movement will materialize in time to hold the present basis."

ANOTHER BATTLE

In Which the Insurgents Meet With Defeat.

MADRID, Feb. 14.—Despatches received here from Havana say that the Spaniards, under General Cornell and Colonel Hernadez have defeated the insurgents under General Antonio Maceo, north of Pinar del Rio, capital of the province of that name. The despatches add that the insurgents lost twenty-four killed, while the Spanish loss was only two killed and seven wounded, including General Cornell, who was slightly injured. It was further stated that Maxim Gomez was still in the vicinity of Havana.

Mr. Catron Boasts of New Mexico's Educational Facilities.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 14.—Delegate Catron, of New Mexico, today made an argument before the senate committee on territories for the passage of the bill providing for the admission of New Mexico to statehood. He contended that New Mexico was entitled to this recognition on account of its wealth and population, and also the superior educational facilities of the territory. The committee did not indicate in any way when the bill would be taken up.

BRIGHAM'S VIEWS.

The Master of the National Grange Talks.

General Condition of Farmers is Not Improved—Free Wool Has Not Benefited Them.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Feb. 14.—J. P. Brigham, of Delta, Ohio, master of the National Framers' Grange, who is now in this city, speaking of the general condition of the farmers says: "Over the entire country there seems to be a common suffering among farmers and also a very unequality of crops. In some parts of the country the crops have been heavy, but in other sections farmers have been particularly unfortunate. Prices are lower this year than they have ever been. The suffering among farmers all over the country is a great deal worse this year than it has been for years. Prices are lower than they were during the panic of 1893 and 1894. Oats, hay, corn and potatoes are not selling for over half the price that was secured last year. The farmer who was fortunate enough to have large crops is not in an enviable position and the farmer who suffered by small crops is worse off. Their general condition is not encouraging and I cannot see any indication of future prosperity until definite action is taken by the government on tariff and monetary questions. The farmers feel that they were grossly discriminated against when wool was put on the free list and many of them have suffered from this. The theory that free wool would benefit us has not been substantiated by results and we have suffered from this among other things."

TURKISH OUTRAGES.

Sad Story Which Comes to a Young Armenian.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 14.—Giragos Tomanian is a young Armenian of this city, who has just received sad news from home. The young man is almost prostrated by a letter which he received from his uncle, Khiatjain Tomanian written December 21, 1895, in the village of Oazounaba, Palaus, province of Diarbekir, Armenia. This place is twenty days distant from Constantinople by horse. The letter says: "I wrote you the horrible happenings which are unequaled in the history of our village. Brother, they have struck our quiet village; they have burned our church and our home and robbed us of everything. They have killed nearly every one. Those who are left have changed their religion and have become Mohammedans. But this is not all. Let me write and relate about your home. Your brother's wife and your little boy are killed. Your wife and mother have thrown themselves into the Euphrates in order to save themselves from the Turkish outrages. Your sister is living yet, but I wish she might have been killed with the rest, for they have taken her and married her to a Kurd and have changed religion to Mohammedanism. The massacre continued for three days. Very few of us are left now in the village."

NEGRO HANGED.

Murdered His Neighbor Without Provocation.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—John, alias "Patsy" Harris, a negro murderer, was hanged in the District of Columbia jail at 11:37 this morning.

The crime for which John, alias "Patsy" Harris today paid the death penalty was committed on the afternoon of July 4th last, in that portion of Georgetown known as "Boston." Matthew Spruell, the murdered man, and Harris, both colored, lived in the same house, together with their families. On the day of the murder Harris came home under the influence of liquor, and understanding his wife to say that Spruell had refused to speak to her, immediately started out looking for trouble. He found Spruell in a barber shop and fired at the wall of the room merely, he says, to scare him. Spruell becoming frightened, ran into the street, pursued by Harris, who fired upon him with fatal effect. There was little or no provocation for the murder, although Harris claimed on the witness stand that Spruell at first made an assault upon him with a razor. Harris was twenty-five years of age and leaves a wife and child.

WANT APPLICANTS.

Supply of Eligibles Not Equal to the Demand.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 14.—The United States civil service commission will hold examinations on March 10 in Boston, New York, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco for the position of meat inspectors, stock examiner and tagger. For all of these positions the supply of eligibles is not equal to the demand. Application blanks and information in regard to the examinations will be furnished on request by the commission. Applicants for the meat inspector examination must be graduates of some recognized veterinary college, and applicants for the stock examination must have had at least three years' experience in handling meats or meat producing animals. Applications for these examinations will be accepted from local residents of any state or the District of Columbia.

Wants to Prove She Is Part Negro.

MUNCIE, Ind., Feb. 14.—James Walker, colored, and his wife, who was Miss Hallie Shaffer, white, were in the police court on the charge of unlawfully marrying. Mayor Cromer withheld his decision and they were returned to jail, not being able to furnish bond for $1,000. Miscegenation in Indiana is a felony punishable by a fine of $1,000 and ten years' imprisonment. The woman says her grandfather was a negro and that his wife was a white woman. Walker's father was thought to be a white man. Mrs. Walker says she will prove that she is part negro.

IDENTIFIED THE HAT.

Miss Bryan's Parents Recognize Her Headgear.

The Canal Being Dragged in the Hopes of Finding the Head of the Murdered Girl.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 14.—The authorities here have a letter from Greencastle, Ind., in which the parents of Pearl Bryan identify the hat sent to them as that of Pearl, and give other information that has lead to all the officers being employed today in searching for the head. The canal was drained during the night and different sections of workmen have examined its muddy bottom, but nothing has been found up to noon, although the whole course of the canal was examined. The officers think now that the hat found near the body was that of Pearl; that she was knocked senseless and that the head was probably badly beaten up before it was cut off. Everything is being done to get all the evidence available on this side of the river, so as to turn Jackson and Walling over to the Kentucky authorities tomorrow.

A special from Frankfort, Ky., says: "Governor Bradley has been examining the cases today and requested Sheriff Plummer to return to Newport, Ky., for additional papers and evidence and that he would then issue the requisition tomorrow. Sheriff Plummer left for Frankfort at noon and will return tomorrow, but it is not expected that Jackson and Walling will not be transferred until next week, as their lawyers will go to Governor Bushnell to contest the requisition.

"COPS ARE COMIN'."

The Dog Must Have Heard About It.

He Made His Escape Before the Officers Arrived—Police Station Scrubbed Out.

Somebody reported to Officer Phipps this morning that there was a dog at No. 15 West Creighton avenue that was in a bad shape. It was said the dog got its foot in a steel trap about a month ago and immediately crawled under the house. He had been there most of the time ever since and nobody could get near him to release his foot from the trap. Officer Phipps was asked to shoot the dog. He reported the case to Humane Officer Schlaudroff because the dog was in such a place that one man alone could not reach him. The two officers went to the house this forenoon, but the dog had disappeared, trap and all.

SCRUBBED OUT.

The police station received a scrubbing out this morning. The officers over there say this has become a regular annual event, and that they scrub out on Valentine day each year whether the place needs it or not.

CASE OF CRUELTY.

When Officer Hines went to the barn at No. 30 Hough street yesterday evening to remove the tramp who claimed his feet were frozen, he found also a goat with a broken leg. Hines found the party to whom the animal belonged and ordered him to kill the crippled goat at once. It was learned that the animal had been suffering with the broken leg for a long time and that it had received no attention.

Under the newly redistricted wards there will be in the city forty four election precincts. Under the old arrangement there were thirty six.

GARBAGE WAGONS.

The new garbage wagons were taken to the crematory this morning. They attracted much attention as they were hauled down street. The four wagons cost the city $900.

A CHEEKY TRAMP.

The police took up a tramp in a barn at No. 30 Hough street, yesterday, who claimed that both feet were frozen. He was taken in the patrol wagon to Hope hospital, where Dr. Schrader examined him and found there was nothing wrong with him. The tramp was ordered to leave the hospital and became so abusive that he was locked up in the police station. The imposter admitted that he practiced the deception hoping he would be allowed to remain in the hospital until the cold weather was over.

REMOVED A CHILD.

Humane Officer Schlaudroff yesterday took a thirteen year-old girl from the family of Mrs. Florence Case, of No. 117 West Butler street. Neighbors claimed the child was being mistreated at home.

WOLF THE WINNER.

He Carries Off the Prize in the Billiard Tournament.

Last night the billiard tournament which has been in progress at the Home billiard hall ended in a victory for Sam Wolf. He played seven games and won every one. Last night's game was between Wolf and Cooper. Cooper was to make 150 to Wolf's 100. In the twelfth inning the score stood Cooper 85, Wolf 9. Then Wolf made a spurt and ran out his string when Cooper had 141. The prize diamond pin was presented to Wolf. Johnson and Thomas have both challenged him to a new championship series to be played within sixty days. The summary of the tournament is as follows:

PICKPOCKETS

Operate Among High School Scholars.

Numerous Petty Thefts Occur in the Cloak Rooms During the School Hours.

The scholars of the High school, on East Wayne street, have for the last few weeks been the victims of petty pick pockets. Numerous times lately small amounts of money have been stolen from them during school hours.

The thefts have been committed in the cloak rooms. A number of the young lady scholars get their noonday lunches down town each day, and for this purpose they carry a small amount of change. They leave their money in their coat pockets in the cloak rooms. Frequently, of late, these pockets have been picked. Today one young lady looked for her lunch money and found it gone. To a SENTINEL reporter she said she had been robbed several times before, having lost, altogether, about $2.50. Several other girls standing near added that others had suffered in a similar manner, some of them being among the victims.

An effort is being made to capture the thief, but thus far it has been unsuccessful.

It is hoped he may be caught and thieving thus be stopped.

GENERAL WEYLER says he will give the Cubans eight days to lay down their arms and surrender. The Cubans think that it will take General Weyler about eight years to make them do it.

DID you get your valentine, and do you know who sent it?

IF Mr Hunter could get five more votes he would be the next United States senator from Kentucky—so near, and yet so far.

THE New York Herald wants "the United States to go slow in recognizing belligerent rights of Cubans." According to our way of thinking, that's just what we have been doing—too awfully slow.

SENATOR QUAY announces that he is in the presidential race to stay. Well, the other fellows—McKinley, Reed, Allison and the rest, feel the same way, and this will make it lively in the republican national convention.

THE Maher-Fitzsimmons prize fight, it is now announced, has been postponed until Monday, because Maher's eyes are inflamed. If that fight comes off, his eyes will be in a good deal worse condition than they are now, after Fitzsimmons gets through with him.

MR GLADSTONE is not yet again in the British parliament; there is only the rumor that he has determined despite his age, to return. It is only for the cause of Armenia, and the fact that she has been forsaken in the hour of her crucifixion by Great Britain and by all the powers of Europe, that at this period in his life could induce him to even think of re entering the great world arena of debate.

MR AMOS H. WALTERS, of this city, was elected vice president of the State Lincoln league, and Mr. E K. Dorr is a delegate at large to the national meeting of Lincoln league clubs. H. Migley, of Columbia City.

MASSACHUSETTS is in the throes of a campaign to change the state constitution so as to provide for biennial elections and legislatures. The opposition to the change is very vigorous based on the argument that frequent elections insure greater fidelity on the part of public officers, who are called to accountability at frequent intervals of time, while biennial elections place the officers and legislatures farther away from the people. This is a very strong argument, but it has been made without avail in all the states that have adopted the biennial system. Massachusetts is one of the very few remaining states which adhere to the annual system.

THE state census recently completed in Kansas shows a decrease of 97,000, compared with the census of 1890 Taking into account the natural increase of its population, it is evident that at least 150,000 people have moved out of Kansas since 1890, and more are going. This migration is attributed to the long continued drought and bad crops. Efforts are being made to attract some of the people of the large cities to Kansas, but the movement does not seem to succeed very well. It looks as if Kansas would have to be able to point to several good crops before it can hope to add any considerable number of desirable settlers to its population.

BANKRUPTCY bills are pending in both houses of congress, but, as has been the case in several previous congresses, it is by no means certain that the interest in the matter will crystallize in legislation. The judiciary committee of both houses are considering bills. In the house it is likely that a measure similar to the Torrey bill, which has heretofore been in evidence, will pass. Such a bill is now before a sub committee. There is a controversy in the committee as to whether both voluntary and involuntary bankruptcy shall be provided for. Two members of the committee stand wide apart on this question, but it is said that there may be a compromise between them on the basis of involuntary bankruptcy in cases of fraud.

The North Pole.

If the report is true that the north pole has been found, it is a very important discovery, for by it that has been accomplished which men have been seeking for hundreds of years. It will be of no special scientific value except the fact of having discovered the north pole. There is no difference there from any other point on the earth's surface except that it is at the pole or the stationary point on the earth's axis, from which every direction is south. It would simply be a scientific satisfaction to know that that much talked of region had been visited and explored by man.

Many brave men have tried to find the north pole, and many have been the lives lost in these efforts. At first there was some rational excuse for the risk taken in casting one's self away on the great desert of ice north of the arctic circle. Early in the century navigators had strange notions about the northwestern passage, but of late years the discovery of the north pole has come to be a mere matter of sentiment. It may be that Dr Nansen will have discovered something of importance at the pole, but few believe that beyond the gratification of curiosity, with a report that "the north star is directly overhead, or near it" or that "the pole is surrounded by ice" or "by an open sea, much will be added to the sum of human knowledge.

Useful or not, wise or not, scientific or not possible or not, the discovery of the pole is, or was, a necessity that, once set up, had to be complied with. The most remarkable work done in this line has been of recent years. Not more than a dozen of the many expeditions that set out with great ado have accomplished anything worthy of mention, and for each actual voyage of exploration there have been numerous search or relief expeditions. In the case of the Franklin expedition, for instance, no less than forty different attempts were made to rescue or at least learn the fate of the party.

Among the most notable voyages of discovery were these, mentioned below in chronological order.

1827—Captain Parry reached latitude 82 45.

1827—Captain Ross with the Victory, lost in the ice, reached latitude 81 27.

1845—Sir John Franklin (with the Erebus and Terror; lost in the ice.

1855—Dr. Kane (Advance) reached latitude 80 35.

1871—Captain Peterman (Hansa) 81 05.

1871—Captain Hall (Polaris) 82 16.

1876—Captain Nares (Alert and Discovery), 83 10.

1879—Lieutenant De Long (Jeannette), lost, 72.15.

1881—Lieutenant Greely (Proteus), 83.20.

1891—Lieutenant Peary (Kite), 83.24.

1892—Bjoring and Kalshmins (Ripple), lost; 79 49.

1893—Lieutenant Peary (Falcon), 82 34.

It is believed by many students of arctic matters that Dr. Nansen has not drifted nearer the pole than the eightieth parallel of latitude, or 600 miles from the goal for which he has risked his life. He may now be fast in the ice in the latitude of northern Spitzbergen or southern Franz Josef Land, and if this should prove to be the case he will only have four or five hundred miles to travel to reach Siberia. If he has met with difficulty and turned back in time, before the strength of his men has become exhausted by the long vigils and many deprivations of the Arctic nights, he may yet succeed in reaching civilization with the survivors of his party.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Act Preventing Garnishment Said to Have Been Evaded.

LOGANSPORT, Ind., Feb. 14—Three suits were filed here yesterday that are said to be the only ones of the kind ever brought in the state. Robert Green, an engineer on the Panhandle, is the plaintiff and the several defendants are the Logan Milling company, David C. Beatty, a fruit dealer, and T. M. Quigley & Co, candy manufacturers.

This is a strong labor union city, and several years ago a business block was built by non-union workmen. The result was that every labor union boycotted the building and would buy nothing from the occupants or from any person who encouraged them. One or two men began business in the building, but all failed after a short time. One of these was Charles Chidester, a son-in-law of Green. Green loaned him $2 000 to begin business, and in a short time he was $3,000 in debt, and had a stock worth but $2 300. Green then assumed the debts and took the stock and closed the business. The defendants mentioned above then sold their accounts to G. O. Smith, a lawyer of Wheeling, W. Va, who brought suit against the railroad company at Wheeling as garnishee defendant and collected the amounts from Green's wages.

It is alleged that by selling the accounts out of the state the defendants evaded the law, which prohibits garnishment, and allows a householder exemption on $600 worth of property The present suits are brought to recover damages accrued from this evasion. The case is attracting a great deal of attention among lawyers, and will be carried to the supreme court before a final settlement can be made.

All wise men should read the great advertisement of the new firm, A. K. Hurst & Co., proprietors of the Globe

Jury's Verdict.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 14—The jury in the Holliday damage case brought in a verdict which awarded damages to Mrs Fannie Holliday in the sum of $500 for malicious prosecution. The case attracted considerable attention from the fact that Mrs. E. L. Holliday, who was a co-defendant with her husband, was a daughter of the late Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio.

GRATIFYING RESULTS.

Interesting Experiments with the New Stomach Remedy.

Not a Patent Medicine, But a Safe Cure for All Forms of Indigestion.

The results of recent investigation have established, beyond question the great value of the new preparation for indigestion and stomach troubles; it is composed of the digestive acids, pepsin, bismuth, Golden Seal and similar stomachics, prepared in the form of 20 grain lozenges, pleasant to the taste, convenient to carry when traveling, harmless to the most delicate stomach, and probably the safest, most effectual cure yet discovered for indigestion, sour stomach, loss of appetite and flesh, nausea, sick headaches, palpitation of heart, and the many symptoms arising from imperfect digestion of food. They cure because they cause the food to be promptly and thoroughly digested before it has time to sour, ferment and poison the blood and nervous system.

Judge Frank Ives, of District Court of Crookston, Minn, says: For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit, with few exceptions, I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years.

Geo. W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen appetite, perfect digestion.

FATE IN FEBRUARY.

[A Valentine.]

When all the fields are white with snow,
And February's sun is fair,
With Lelia's dimpled face aglow,
What care I for the winter air?

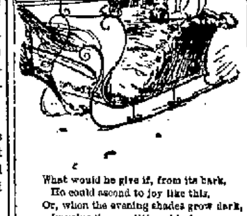

Companioned so within the sleigh,
Her silver voice is cheer enough,
And while the horses speed away
One hand I clasp within the muff.

Her lily lidded, azure eyes
Add to the quick, electric thrill,
For now two human destinies
Depend upon a maiden's will.

The friendly south wind's soft caress
Bespeaks a solution fair,
And one unruly, roguish tress
Falls where it banishes despair.

Upon a wayside orchard bole
We note the frisky chickadee.
He seems to say, "Upon my soul,
Two precious fools, oh, see, oh, see!"

What would he give if, from its bark,
He could ascend to joy like this,
Or, when the evening shades grow dark,
Imprint the repetitious kiss?

Dear Lelia, though the spring delay,
And all the summer turn to snow,
Our lives are pledged to endless May,
And nothing else I care to know.

JOEL BENTON.

THE LEADING LADY.

A VALENTINE DAY SKETCH.

[Copyright, 1896, by American Press Association.]

Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company, was in a very bad humor as she stepped off the train at Groveville. The weather had something to do with it, no doubt. It was weather such as the English describe as "beastly," yet it was characteristic of February.

But the weather was not all to blame. Miss Defoe had been a leading lady for three months, and she was thoroughly disgusted with the stage. She had worked for several years with this ambition in view, and now that she had reached it she wished that her lot had been cast anywhere but on the stage.

The prospect was certainly not alluring. The tour of the Walkback Dramatic company had not been successful. Salaries had not been paid since the first week out, and now there was a possibility that the entire combination would be stranded in some out of the way nook on the New England circuit.

She envied the young women whom she saw in the cheerful homes she passed by in her walk to the barnlike hotel. They had fond mothers and kind fathers probably and friends whom they had known for years. They did not have to travel all day in drafty, uncomfortable cars, eat their meals at railroad restaurants and wonder on what day they would be left penniless among strangers.

Yet she realized that these same young women envied her.

"Fools, every one," she muttered to herself and followed the rest of the company into the hotel.

In fact, a good many people in Groveville were feeling rather sour that day. The rain that had begun at daylight was still falling steadily and was turning the snow into slush that seemed to exert a dampening and chilling influence over everything and everybody.

John Brickley was perhaps the most cheerful man in town. Just why we will see later. Let us state right here that the dead walls and board fences of Groveville had announced for seven successive days that on Feb. 14 the Walkback Dramatic company, "a grand aggregation of histrionic stars," would present the ever popular drama of "Fanchon, the Cricket," in the opera house.

The prophecy of the posters had come to pass. It was St. Valentine's day, and the Walkback Dramatic company was here. The citizens did not seem to be unduly excited over the fact, however. The "histrionic stars" themselves were soon made aware of this. Their information came from the manager soon after his return from a visit to the local celebrity described on the programme as "lessee and manager."

"Well, what luck?" inquired the leading man as the manager deposited his dripping umbrella in a corner of the hotel corridor.

"Same as usual down east. Small advance sales. Probably won't have $50 in the house tonight."

"Even the weather's against us!" dolefully remarked the leading man.

"Yes, and everything else. Let's go get a drink."

And they did.

John Brickley didn't care a snap for the weather. He had said so a dozen times that afternoon to the customers who had come splashing in out of the wet. Why should he? In the center of his well stocked grocery a big salamander stove blazed away cheerfully, and he was warm and dry.

"HERE'S A PACKAGE FOR YOU, THEN."

Besides this, John was something of a philosopher. So is any man who has been successful. It comes easy when fortune smiles. And John considered that fortune had smiled on him. He had a good business, a neat bank account and nothing to worry him. John helped himself to a cigar from the showcase, swung himself into an easy position on the counter and fell to gazing at a lithograph which hung in his store window. It was a picture of Miss Blanche Defoe, leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company.

"Mighty handsome young lady," John soliloquized. "Hanged if I don't shut up early tonight and go to see that show."

John continued to gaze at the picture. He had very little else to do, as customers were scarce.

John's gazing ended in his making another determination. He felt quite pleased and not a little astonished with himself after he had made it. He chuckled frequently as he ate his supper that night.

"I wonder what the fellows will say to that?" he remarked audibly. Evidently he had matured a scheme in his mind and was picturing the surprise of his friends when he should relate it to them.

John Brickley was quite a favorite among the young men in town. He went to Boston several times a year and had even spent a week in New York. No one doubted that he could have married almost any girl in the village had he so chosen. But he didn't choose. He said he was going to look around a little before he got married.

So John Brickley, being highly satisfied with himself, was convinced that his scheme, whatever it was, was a brilliant and original one. However, it did not interfere with his attending the production of "Fanchon, the Cricket," at the opera house that evening.

He was there in a front seat and a component part of the slim audience that awaited the rise of the curtain.

Behind the footlights there was gloom. The "histrionic stars" were, as a local scene shifter expressed it, "readin the riot act to the boss." They were making a combined onslaught on the manager.

Miss Blanche Defoe was just having her say.

"If the ghost doesn't walk within a week, I'm going to shake the whole business, and that's a straight tip. See?" she concluded with an angry stamp of her foot.

"You'll find the walking bad," retorted the manager with a weak attempt at a laugh.

Miss Defoe did not consider this ancient joke worthy of a reply, but marched off haughtily to the back of the stage and sat down on a trunk.

Just then an usher came in from the front of the house and asked for Miss Defoe.

"That's me," she said

"Here's a package for you, then."

"Now I wonder what this is," she said as she read the address and noticed that there were no postage stamps on the parcel.

"Why don't you open it and see?" remarked the "leading old lady," who had just joined her.

"Good idea," and Miss Defoe proceeded to break the string and tear off the paper wrapping. A pasteboard box was disclosed, and on the cover was written:

"From a fond admirer."

Miss Defoe took off the cover and lifted out a gorgeous creation of blue satin, silk cords and paper lace.

"A valentine, by all that's tragic," she exclaimed.

"And a very pretty one, too," said the leading old lady. "You must have made a hit, my dear."

"All up for the first scene," was the call which interrupted further discussion of the valentine and its mysterious sender.

Miss Defoe went on and capered through the first act as Fanchon with considerably more spirit than any of the other members of the cast could muster. She was thinking of something besides her lines, though.

When the act was over, she took advantage of the wait which the inexperienced scene shifter caused and sent for the usher who had brought her the valentine.

"Do you know the person who sent that package to me?" she asked.

The usher did. He knew all about him and was most happy to give Miss Defoe all the details concerning John Brickley. He even pointed out to her the unsuspecting John through a peephole in the curtain.

"Come back here after the next act," said Miss Defoe to the usher. "I want you to take a note to him."

Miss Defoe was a young lady who could act with great promptness on occasions.

The note was duly delivered, and as a result John Brickley found himself waiting in the parlor of the hotel at 11:15 p. m. that same night, his heart beating somewhat rapidly, but with a determination to see the thing through.

When the actress swept in, clothed in a neat fitting tailor made suit, John felt the last bit of his self possession slipping away from him. He had always been free from embarrassment when in the company of any of the village belles, but before this dashing young woman it was different. Miss Defoe, however, quickly broke the ice.

"Is it you I have to thank for the very pretty valentine I received this evening?" she asked, with a gracious smile.

"WELL, WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE ORIGINAL?"

"Why, yes. I—er—I took the liberty."

"It was very kind of you to remember me."

"I—I had seen your picture," said John hesitatingly, "and I thought you were very—that is—I admired it, and—and"—

"I see," said Miss Defoe, with an effective little laugh. "Well, what do you think of the original?"

John's face grew very red at this frank question, but he was equal to the emergency.

"I think you're just as pretty as the picture, Miss Defoe, and—and a little prettier, hanged if I don't."

Miss Defoe laughed—not a stage "ha ha," but a genuine laugh. Her black eyes sparkled with humor, and she certainly deserved the honest compliment.

"It's very nice of you to say so, I'm sure."

"Well, I mean every word of it," said John, encouraged by his success.

"Do you? Well, there was something in the valentine—something in the way of verses," continued Miss Defoe. "One couplet ran like this:

"If I but thought that you'd be mine,
I'd like to be your Valentine.

"Then, of course, you meant that also."

Now John had not read the verses. In fact, he had not known that there were any verses at all. He had conceived the sending of a valentine to the leading lady of the Walkback Dramatic company as a bold but harmless conceit from which he would never hear a word, but about which he might weave a very pretty romance with which to entertain and surprise his friends. He looked at Miss Defoe, and his embarrassment returned. Still he was not a faint hearted young man, and he admired a woman who could talk like that.

"Did you mean it?" she repeated.

"Yes, by gum, I did," burst out John, with honest intensity.

"Did you really, now? Well, if you did, I might tell you that I've about decided to leave the stage for good."

"Do you mean that you would—you would"—

"Take you for a valentine?" interrupted Miss Defoe. "I will, and right now."

When the Walkback Dramatic company left town the next day, the leading lady was missing. She wrote a note to the manager, making him a present of the three weeks' salary due her and resigning her position. The wedding took place that next day, and John Brickley says that, although it was a mistake, he has never regretted sending that valentine.

TWO ON ICE.

Tales Told by Washington Munchausens During an Idle Hour.

The group around the fire were talking about skating. "I don't pretend to be much of a skater," said the man with his feet on the mantelpiece. "The last time I indulged in the pastime, though, I had the good luck to slip into an airhole."

"You don't call that good luck, do you?" asked the man who had been trying to break into the conversation and tell a story himself.

"Well, under ordinary circumstances I wouldn't call it good luck," replied the man with his feet on the mantel, "but in this instance it led to my catching the largest fish ever found in this section of the country. It happened this way. I was skating around the airhole, and at last ran plumb into it. The lower part of my body went under the ice, but I was able to hold myself up by the arms. At last a man came to help me out, but one of my skates seemed to have become entangled in something below the surface, and he had to call for assistance. Several persons responded, and by their united efforts pulled me and a four pound rock bass through the airhole. The jaws of the fish were held apart by one of my skate blades. I suppose," he added by way of explanation, "that I must have stuck my foot in his mouth when I first went down."

It was the unuttered consensus of opinion that the raconteur was a liar.

There was a short pause, and the man who had been waiting for a chance told of an adventure on Lake Superior. He said that while skating there one evening, far from shore, he was pursued by a monstrous gray wolf. "The wolf chased me about considerably," he said, "but I wasn't afraid, because I always was a good skater and could beat any wolf that was ever created when it came to getting around on the ice. After I had a little fun with the animal, making 'figure eights' and things like that around him, I thought I would put him to some use. So I made a sudden dash around to his rear and caught hold of his tail with one hand. I had a shinney stick in the other and beat him across the back with it. Well, gentlemen, that beast was so shocked and surprised that he didn't know what to do. He jumped around just like a colt that was being broken in. I held on tight, though, and he finally came to the conclusion that he wanted to go home and lit out for shore.

"Gentlemen, I know you will believe me when I say that that was the supreme moment of my life. There I was holding to that wolf's tail with one hand, beating him with the shinney stick which I held in the other and flying over the glassy surface at the rate of about 40 miles an hour. As we neared the shore he slowed up some, and on reaching the land he lay down and died from exhaustion.

"I have his hide at home now," continued the narrator, "and you can see it if you want to."

This seemed satisfactory proof of the truth of the tale. At least no one questioned it, and the meeting adjourned.—Washington Star.

Too Late In the Day.

"Grandpa," said one of the young persons at the table, "you shouldn't eat your soup that way. Do you notice how I do it?"

"My dear child," replied the old gentleman, "I've been eating it this way, as nearly as I can remember, for 957 years, 11 months and 24 days, and I don't think I'll change my style now to please a great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-great-granddaughter with banged hair."

And Methuselah gazed dreamily out through the walls of the tent into the fathomless void beyond and went on pulling his spoon toward him.—Chicago Tribune.

Came to His Rescue.

In the smoking room at the club the low murmur of a man's voice came soothingly to the ears of his listeners.

"It was a most embarrassing predicament," the voice went on. "She was such a lovely girl, and I had no idea it was so late. I stood there debating with myself, and just then"—

A shudder, which the speaker tried in vain to suppress, shook his frame violently.

—"her father came down stairs and helped me out."

Save for the slow and measured rhythm of popping corks the silence which followed was expressive in its intensity.—New York World.

A NOVEL CASE

Which Affects the Transportation of Soldiers.

The Atlantic and Pacific Railroad Sues Uncle Sam for $12.50—Local and Personal News.

An Associated Press dispatch from Los Angeles, Cal., gives the following account of an interesting suit: "An important matter was argued in the United States district court this morning in the case of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad vs. the United States. The railroad is ostensibly suing to secure $12.50 for the transportation of a soldier over its line. The real point to be decided is whether the road is a land grant aided road or not. If it is, it is only entitled to half rates for carrying soldiers; if it is not, it can collect full fares. Several counsel for the government appeared and argued the case. The authorities at Washington are much interested, as the decision will affect the rates charged the government on other trans-continental roads. Judge Wellisor took the matter under advisement. Voluminous briefs have been filed in the case."

RE-ORGANIZATION PLAN PROPOSED.

Winslow S. Pierce, acting for the reorganization committee of the Union Pacific Railroad company, today submitted to the senate committee on Pacific railroads at Washington the reorganization committee's draft of a bill for the re-organization of that road. This bill provides for:

Appointment by the president subject to approval of the senate of a commission of three members to investigate, determine and report to the president the fair cash value of the claim and lien of the United States.

Authority to the commissioners to subpoena and examine witnesses and to have processes of courts.

The report of commissioners or a majority, subject to the approval of the president, is to be conclusive as to the sum which may be paid for the claim and lien of the United States, the secretary of the treasury upon such payment to execute the instrument of assignment of the lien and claim, reserving a sinking fund.

Authority to purchasers to organize a new company, empowered to acquire and operate the lines and the property of the railway company, with such corporate powers as are necessarily involved.

The repeal of the provisions of prior acts which would be inapplicable to the reorganized company under the new conditions and reserving the government's preferred right for the transportation of mails, troops, munitions of war, etc.

Authority and direction to the attorney general, in default of payment of amount fixed by the commission to foreclose the lein of the government, and upon sale to bid to the amount of the indebtedness to the United States.

Reservation of the remedies to the United States and of power to alter, amend or repeal.

FINGER BADLY MANGLED.

William Broom, an employe of the Anthony Wayne works, lost a portion of the middle finger of his right hand this morning. He was working about a cross cut saw and got his hand too close to the sharp blade. The flesh of the finger was lacerated and the bone was slivered and amputation may be necessary.

The shipments from the electric works today included an 1,800 light Wood alternating machine to the Lafayette Gas company, Lafayette, Ind., and a 750 light Wood alternator to the Gowanda Agricultural works, Gowanda, N. Y.

SHADOWS THE PRINCE.

An Anarchist Who is Watched at San Francisco.

San Francisco, Feb. 14.—The Italian colony in this city is considerably agitated over the discovery that Pietro Cori, the anarchist, who was said to have incited Santo Caserio to murder President Carnot, is shadowing Prince Luigi, the nephew of King Humbert, of Italy, who arrived here last week on the warship Christophero Columbo. Since the arrival of the prince he has attended a number of social functions given in his honor, and on each occasion a tall, dark complexioned man was noticed. When the identity of the stranger was learned, the prince asked to see the anarchist. When the tall young man was pointed out to him, the prince watched him with a tinge of well-bred curiosity. Gori says he has no particular motive in following the prince about and attended the balls at which King Humbert's nephew was present for the purpose of seeing the ladies. He admitted that he taught Carnot's slayer the principles of anarchy and was himself a hater of royalty, but denied that he had any evil motive in seeking the company of Prince Luigi.

CLAIMING AN ESTATE.

Suit Brought at Terre Haute to Establish an Heirship.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 14.—Mrs. Sarah Hahn and her brother, James Mansfield, have filed papers here laying claim to the big Lawrence estate, of New York city. The basis of their claim is that their great grandfather bought the land of the government when it was comparatively worthless, and upon his removal west left it uncared for to accumulate value. As time passed, the property was entirely forgotten, and its existence was but recently brought to the notice of the old gentleman's descendants through an advertisement for heirs, printed in a New York paper. It is now worth many thousands.

Wagered That He Would Die.

Frankfort, Ind., Feb. 14.—Daniel Dempster, an eccentric character of this city, after making the rounds of the saloons last evening, taking all kinds of bets that he would be a corpse inside of an hour, was found in an alley shortly afterward with his throat cut from ear to ear and bleeding profusely. He had inflicted the wound with the tip of an oyster can. Domestic troubles he claimed were the cause of his attempted suicide. He will probably recover.

Indiana Farmers Object to Paying 200 Per Cent. Profit and Will Sue.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 14.—A case will likely be aired in the courts of this or Perry county which will go to prove the workings of the coffin trust. The person who bought the coffin was a farmer named Klutinger, who declared that an exorbitant price was charged because he was not in a position to refuse compliance. He took the coffin on credit, but now refuses to pay more than a reasonable profit on the merchant's investment and declares that he can prove that the merchant is charging him 200 per cent. profit and that the merchant has acknowledged this, but declares the trust compels him to do so, and if he refuses the agency will be taken from him.

New York, Feb. 14.—The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janerio, Brazil, telegraphs the important information that a protocol has been signed by the Italian minister and the Brazilian foreign minister, whereby the two countries agree to submit their dispute to the president of the United States. The agreement is similar to that concluded by the former minister, De Martino. It contains additional clauses, however, which are believed to be more favorable to the Italian claimants. All the artificial ice manufacturers of the state are in the association. MERITED REWARD.

SALES OF LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND.

Unequalled in the History of Medicine, Honesty, Excellence, Faithfulness Fitly Rewarded.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Never in the history of medicine has the demand for one particular remedy for female diseases equalled that attained by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never in the history of Mrs. Pinkham's wonderful Compound has the demand for it been so great as it is today. From Maine to California, from the Gulf to the St. Lawrence, come the glad tidings of woman's suffering relieved by it; and thousands upon thousands of letters are pouring in from grateful women, saying that it WILL and does positively cure those painful

Ailments of Women.

It will cure the worst forms of female complaints, all ovarian troubles, inflammation and ulceration, falling and displacements of the womb, and consequent spinal weakness, and is peculiarly adapted to the change of life.

Every time it will cure

Backache.

It has cured more cases of leucorrhœa by removing the cause, than any remedy the world has ever known; it is almost infallible in such cases. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in an early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache.
